Russia Is Given League Council Seat; China Out

Soviet Elected to Permanent Place at Geneva; Japanese Influence Helps Stop Re-election of China

Dr. O. D. Skelton Is Canada's Spokesman

By GEORGE HAMILTON
Canadian Press Staff Writer
Geneva, Sept. 17.—Russia will have a permanent seat in the Council of the League of Nations.

In a few minutes and without comment the Assembly today approved a resolution of Russian membership to a committee, and a resolution of the Council deciding to appoint the U.S.S.R. to a permanent seat in the Council as soon as the Assembly has agreed to Russian membership in the League.

Prime Minister R. B. Bennett of Canada, who has almost completely recovered from his indisposition, attended the meetings of both the steering committee and the League Assembly today.

The Assembly decided China was not eligible for re-election to its non-permanent seat in the Council, but that Spain was. Turkey and Chile were given non-permanent seats, replacing China and Panama.

JAPANESE INFLUENCE
Japanese influence in the Far East and continued influence in League circles, despite her withdrawal, was revealed as decidedly strong when China lost the privilege of eligibility for re-election to her seat in the League Council.

Japanese observers did not conceal their elation over the vote.

One Japanese spokesman said: "We are greatly pleased because, now that China has been virtually cast out of the Council, she will be more disposed to carry on amicable relations with Japan."

Quat Tai-chi, head of the Chinese delegation, was keenly disappointed, especially since the much-publicized League plan for the economic reconstruction of China has been temporarily shelved.

Wide Support For Insurance

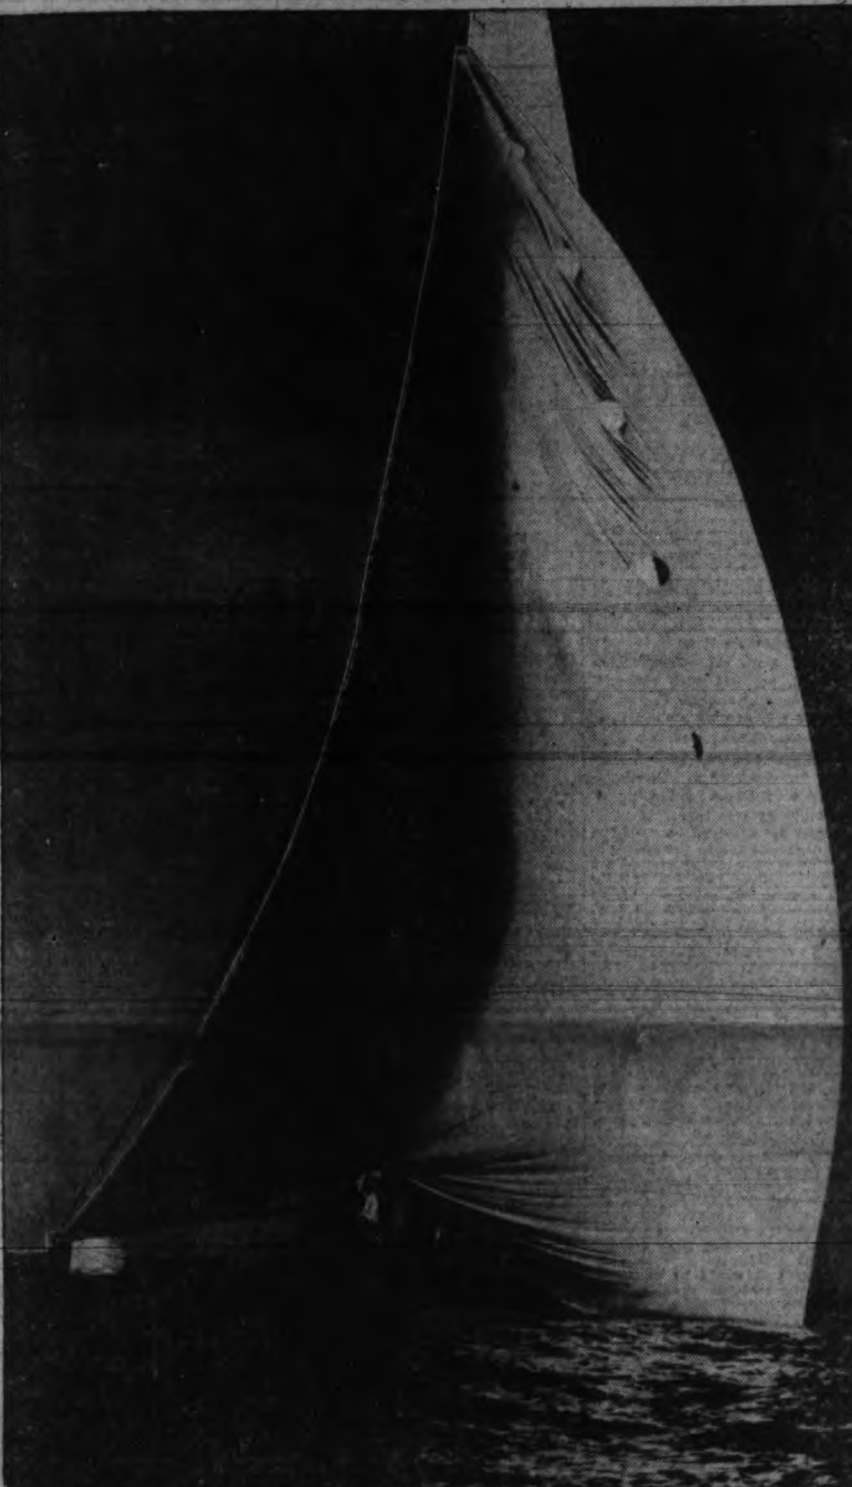

Hon. G. M. Weir Stresses Need For Health Plan For Province

Canadian Press
Kamloops, B.C., Sept. 17.—Approximately 65 per cent of the patients in hospital public wards in British Columbia pay nothing for their medical care, Hon. George M. Weir, Provincial Secretary, told the British Columbia Medical Association convention here in an address stressing the desirability of state health insurance.

Questionnaires to doctors, dentists and nurses had produced overwhelming support for a system of health insurance, he said. Of 300 doctors queried, 400 had replied from ninety-one different post offices in the province and fewer than 10 per cent

VICTOR IN TO-DAY'S AMERICA'S CUP RACE

When Endeavour finished two minutes and nine seconds ahead of Rainbow on the course off Newport, R.I., today she was carrying the great Annie Oakley spinnaker seen in the picture above, as well as her big mainsail. Skipper Vanderbilt, on the run home from the half-way mark, changed Rainbow's sails, with the exception of the mainsail, several times, but Skipper Sopwith stuck to his Annie Oakley. The picture shows the holes which are a feature of the spinnaker. They are designed to split dead air, so every breath of breeze may be utilized.

WIND FANNED SHIP BLAZE

Nothing Peculiar About Quick Spread of Morro Castle Fire, Says Steward

ACTING CAPTAIN SUSPENDED ONCE

Washington, Sept. 17.—William F. Wams, acting captain of the steamship Morro Castle when it burst off New Jersey September 8, was suspended in 1926, it was shown by records of the Steamboat Inspection Service here today, for failure to hold fire drills on the Ward Line steamship Yumurt for several weeks.

Associated Press

New York, Sept. 17.—James Pond, second steward of the ill-fated liner Morro Castle, told the federal board of inquiry here today he saw nothing peculiar about the rapid spread of the fire in the liner a week ago last Saturday.

"No, sir, I did not," he replied to a direct question. "I would say the wind fanned the fire swiftly through the ship."

Pond was emphatic in a statement all members of the steward's department were capable and experienced. "I picked them myself," he said.

The second steward said he and several officers took charge of the passengers as they began "streaming up on deck." He said he and the officers notified the passengers, led them down to C deck, and that later when the smoke became so thick he could scarcely see, the passengers were told to descend to D deck.

Pond testified he had never seen any inflammable polishes on the ship.

TO APPEAR AGAIN

Dickerson N. Hoover, chairman of the board of inquiry, said today the officers of the Morro Castle would be re-examined this week, and that George I. Alagna, first assistant radio operator of the ship, would be called later in the week.

Asked whether Capt. Wams had ever commented on fire drill attendance, Pond said: "Yes, Capt. Wams once remarked: 'Not many turned out to drill today. You had better take it up with them.'"

EXCUSED FROM DRILL
He testified the late Capt. Willmott customarily had excused men on duty from attending fire and boat drill.

"What do you know of drunkenness among the crew?" Hoover questioned. "Was there any?"

"Naturally," the witness responded. "When we were in port some of the stewards got drunk, but not on duty. I would not permit it."

"There has been some criticism that such a large number of the crew escaped and so many passengers did not. Why was that?" Hoover asked.

Pond expressed the opinion many passengers had jumped overboard prematurely.

"We all tried to quiet them," he declared.

WOULD ABOLISH LIQUOR TRAFFIC

Driving of It Out of Canadian Life Predicted at United Church Gathering

Kingston, Ont., Sept. 17.—"We must oppose the liquor traffic," declared Rev. D. N. McLachlan, D.D., Toronto, secretary of the board of evangelism and social service, in presenting his report to the general council of the United Church of Canada today.

"The time must come when it will be driven out of our national life," he said.

From the standpoint of its institutions the board reported a year of financial stringency.

The report on co-ordination of ministers' salaries, presented by Dr. H. W. Addison of Toronto, was referred to a committee for further investigation.

SILENCE ZONE IN BRITAIN EXTENDED

London, Sept. 17.—Motorists over the week-end generally showed perfect willingness to comply as London's "zone of silence" for motor cars during the night hours was extended to every "built-up" area in the Kingdom. This applies to every road on which there are street lamps not more than 200 yards apart.

In the silence zone honking of horns and unnecessary noise in driving cars is banned from 11.30 p.m. to 7 a.m.

Endeavour, After Reaching Half-way Mark of Thirty-mile Race Short Distance Behind U.S. Defender, Takes Lead on Run Home and Completes Contest Well Ahead of Competitor; Spinnaker of Rainbow Split

Associated Press

Aboard U.S.C.G. cutter Argo off Newport, Sept. 17.—T. O. M. Sopwith's challenging British sloop Endeavour today won the first race of the America's Cup series from Harold S. Vanderbilt's Rainbow, scoring the first British race victory in the yachting classic since the late Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock IV won the second race from Resolute in 1920.

Fifteen seconds behind on the beat to windward, the big British racer fairly ate up the breeze on the run home to administer a decisive defeat to the defender. Endeavour's margin was two minutes nine seconds by official timing.

The first attempt of the two last Saturday was declared "no contest" when the time limit of five and one-half hours expired.

Endeavour finished at 2.38.44 this afternoon, making her time for the thirty-mile windward-leeward course three hours 43 minutes 44 seconds. Rainbow's official finishing time was given as 2.40.03.

While Skipper Vanderbilt was looking for a breeze on the run home and shifted sail several times, Skipper Sopwith bore right for the line, his huge Annie Oakley spinnaker, the sail with the holes in it, filling beautifully in the nine-knot breeze and shoving the blue-hulled challenger through the water to increase the lead. The Rainbow picked up the pace and had rounded the halfway buoy.

SEPINNAKER SPLIT
Just before the race was won Sopwith jibed and it appeared his crew was a little slow in breaking out canvas. The Rainbow picked up several lengths and it seemed that while she was off her course she might make a race of it at the finish, but as she bore down on the Endeavour, which had lost way, her spinnaker split at the bottom.

MUCH NOISE AT FINISH
A perfect bedlam of sound broke out as the big challenger boiled across the finish line, crowds on the yachts, whistles and bells adding to the din.

Sopwith's sportsmanship had made him a popular figure with the preponderantly American crowd.

The conclusion seems inescapable that Endeavour is the faster boat in an honest breeze.

At 2.55 Endeavour doused her spinnaker and set a big Genoa jib, but during the delay Rainbow made up many lengths.

Just when it appeared she might have a chance of catching the British boat, Rainbow's spinnaker split at the foot and she had to douse it.

The breeze at the start of the race was sixteen knots from a south-southeasterly direction.

OLD RECORD STANDS
Although both Rainbow and Endeavour were under the old mark for the fifty-mile windward-leeward race, Endeavour failed to crack the record for the full course, set at 3.24.29 by the United States defender Vigilant in 1923.

Vigilant also held the old windward-leeward record of 2.06.40, which Rainbow shaded by 2 minutes 31 seconds, and Endeavour by twenty-one seconds less. Their time to the mark were: Rainbow 3.04.09, Endeavour 2.04.30.

LAUNCH CEDAR TRADE DRIVE

Government Gives Financial Assistance in Market Extension Work

An energetic campaign to dispose of British Columbia's 100,000,000 feet cedar surplus will be waged jointly by the provincial government and the lumbermen of the province.

A special warrant of $5,000 was passed by the cabinet today toward the expenses of a cedar commissioner, who will go to England and conduct market extension work. The B.C. Loggers' Association will pay a like amount. J. C. Berto has been selected for this post.

It was pointed out that due to the failure of the local and U.S. markets, the vast surplus of stocks has been built up and something must be done to dispose of them.

Some time ago, lumbermen approached the Economic Council with a scheme for reduction of royalties to help them get out of the cedar difficulty. This apparently was not accepted, but the plan to increase the market adopted.

Considerable success has already met the market extension work carried out for lumber products in Britain this year, exports to the United Kingdom mounting to a new all time figure.

Fall Session Plan At Ottawa Abandoned

Forecast Now Is For Session of Parliament Starting in January, With Dissolution in April and General Election Late in Summer

Canadian Press

Ottawa, Sept. 17.—Lack of anything in the way of pre-session activity among government departments, coupled with unofficial information circulating about Ottawa, has led to the general belief the idea of a fall session has been abandoned. There is every evidence that regardless of the outcome of the five federal by-elections to be decided in Ontario a week from today, the Bennett government will again meet Parliament, probably early in the New Year.

An apparently reasonable forecast is that Parliament will be called about the middle of January, with government legislation, small in volume, ready for early presentation, and an early budget showing reduction in taxation, and restoration of pay cuts in the civil service.

INDUSTRIAL CONTROL
Unemployment insurance, advanced legislation designed to place a large measure of control on industry to remedy evils disclosed by the Stevens committee on price spreads and wages, and possibly amendments to the British North America Act will be laid before the members.

When this has been done, and the expected strenuous agitation for dissolution and an appeal to the people is set up by the opposition, the government will oblige it, it is forecast. In view of reports the Liberal opposition will block passage of supply with every weapon at its disposal, it is believed dissolution will come in April and late in the summer the people will express their opinion at the polls.

BENNETT'S INDISPOSITION
Illness of the Prime Minister after his arrival at Geneva for the League of Nations assembly brought some uneasiness to his associates here, but they were reassured by the fact it were opposed. Only nine doctors had refused to co-operate. Dentists appeared to favor the scheme in about equal proportions, and private duty nurses were even stronger for the system than the doctors, the minister declared.

"Properly conceived, health insurance appears conducive not only to sound humanity but also to sound economy," Dr. Weir said. "Thus co-ordinated, health insurance means a public saving."

DIAGNOSIS FOR ALL
Under health insurance, even in a partial system such as British Columbia's first scheme, must necessarily be the minister said it would be possible to provide adequate facilities for diagnosis for everybody. This was the greatest need.

Plans under consideration for British Columbia embraced studies of the actuarial basis, whether or not the panel system should be used in urban centres and salaried doctors in sparsely settled areas; collection of statistics as to hospitalization, maternity benefits, etc., and the financial problem.

All the benefits usually urged by advocates could not be given at the outset, he said. It was necessary in making changes of this sort to proceed slowly, so as not to produce chaotic results, and to keep within what the province could afford.

TO EASE BURDEN
The results to be aimed at were a more equitable distribution of the heavy sickness bill now incurred by the people and a general improvement in public health by preventive measures.

On the question of federal aid, Dr. Weir questioned a resolution moved by Prime Minister R. B. Bennett in 1930 recommending the payment out of the Dominion Treasury of one-third the cost of provincial health units. The principle underlying federal aid for health insurance was identical, he said.

He cited some salient facts of current health economics in the province, stating that scarcely 3 per cent of government medical grants was allocated for preventive work while 97 per cent was used for curative purposes.

DOCTORS' EARNINGS
From 1929 to 1934, the average remuneration of medical men decreased by 40 per cent. Over half the doctors, in British Columbia, were not earning less than $3,000 a year, from which expenses must be deducted. Many doctors were collecting less than $200 a year. Last year, 52 per cent of all patients did not pay, while in 1929, the figure was 29 per cent.

Five out of eight Canadians of average means could not afford a trained nurse when such services were badly needed and about 60 per cent of the private duty nurses were practically unemployed, the minister continued.

Serious illness for the patient of average means, in hospital from sixty to ninety days, meant virtual bankruptcy for from five to ten years. He said that only the indigent and the rich received adequate medical and hospital care. The other 90 to 70 per cent of the people not only did not get it, but had to foot the bill for the indigents.

He quoted Lord Asquith as saying, "Health insurance will be found in the long run the greatest boon ever conferred on the working people of this country."

The undersigned delegates to the fifteenth Assembly of the League of Nations to enter the League and give to it its valuable collaboration."

WILL FOR PEACE
The reply by Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet Foreign Commissioner, said: "The Soviet government has received, signed by a large number of members of the League, the telegram whereby, emphasizing the mission of the League is the organization of peace, and that this mission calls for the collaboration of states in general."

"It considers that coming from a large majority of members of the League, the invitation it has received interprets the League's true will for peace, and bears witness that the League recognizes the necessity of collaborating with the U.S.S.R."

"The Soviet government therefore is ready to respond to this invitation and become a member of the League. It undertakes to observe all international obligations and all decisions having a compulsory character for members in accordance with the first article of the League covenant."

Besides Switzerland, Belgium, Portugal, Holland and Argentina all opposed Russian entry. The committee finally voted thirty-eight to three, with seven abstentions, in favor of Russian admittance. The matter now goes to the League Assembly.

CANADA'S POSITION
Dr. O. D. Skelton, Canadian Under-Secretary for External Affairs, spoke in behalf of the Dominion, declaring Russian entry on the whole was desirable.

"Our fundamental difficulty lies in the wide difference that exists between the social and political principles of our country and those of the Soviet union," he said.

"We are emphatic and unrepentant believers in the freedom of opinion, freedom of the press, freedom of religious belief and worship, and organization of industrial life on a basis of individual initiative, controlled to bring it into harmony with the common good."

Senate Munitions Inquiry at Washington Is Told How U.S. Department of Commerce Helped Form School at Canton

Associated Press

Washington, Sept. 17.—Testimony the United States Department of Commerce aided in recruiting and formation of a military air school for the Canton, China, government, was laid today before the Senate munitions inquiry committee.

The matter was described as having been handled "very confidentially" last year in order that it might not come to the attention of another Oriental power, which might challenge the "propriety" of the action.

The testimony came out in questioning of United Aircraft export officials. A letter saying many former United States government men were employed by the Pratt & Whitney Aircraft Company to sell planes and motors were coupled in testimony before the munitions committee with that of the original investment of the concern had paid in eight years more than 1,000,000 per cent.

Appeals For Saskatchewan

Premier Urges Aid For Needy Farmers Who Produced Much Wheat

Canadian Press

Kingston, Sept. 17.—Co-operation of spiritual, political and financial resources looking toward the maintenance of the 500,000 residents of southern Saskatchewan is the need of the prairie provinces to-day, Premier J. G. Gardiner of Saskatchewan, told a luncheon gathering of service clubs here to-day.

The premier sketched a graphic picture of conditions in the drought-stricken areas of his province. Wheat had brought more new money into Canada during the last thirty years than any other commodity, he said. Saskatchewan had produced more of that wheat than any other province combined. Southwestern Saskatchewan had produced twice as much wheat over a twenty-year period as all the rest of the provinces.

The 500,000 people living in this area had brought more new money into this country to turn the wheels of industry than any other similar area in the world, he said.

Mr. Gardiner continued, "I kept there they would produce the same results in the next twenty years."

SEVERAL FACTORS
Premier Gardiner detailed various factors such as drought, low prices for wheat, debt loans, exhaustion of previously stored-up capital, and an over-supply of livestock in the southern section or dried-out portions of the province, which have created the present problem.

He believed it would be well to maintain the strikers' residence of the southern area until wheat producing is again possible and the wheels of industry begin to move.

"Our problem in the drought area has no connection with the unemployment problem other than to the extent that unemployment lowers the price of commodities," said Premier Gardiner.

"The objective of everyone in Canada, whether entrusted with spiritual, political or financial powers should be to place as many people as possible in prosperous, contented, happy Christian homes."

"What we are asking in Saskatchewan is the co-operation of all these forces towards the present maintenance of the 500,000 people in their homes until they can repay."

DEWIS RUMORS
Quebec, Sept. 17.—Graham F. Towers, head of Canada's new central bank, the Bank of Canada, stated just before he sailed for Europe in the liner Empress of Britain Saturday that intimations the bank would be subversive to British financial interests had no foundation. "I suppose all central banks try to co-operate with each other on information," he said.

Accompanied by Mrs. Towers, the young financier will spend about six weeks visiting European banking establishments to study the workings of central banks. Paris, Amsterdam, Stockholm and London are the focal points of the itinerary.

"We must be back as soon as we can," Mr. Towers said, "as the bank is to start functioning reasonably soon after the first of next year."

As yet Canada's bank has neither organization nor staff. He said the staff would not be a large one. It will total, he expects, about 210, of whom 140 will be civil servants transferred from the department of the Assistant Receiver-General. Headquarters will be in Ottawa.

HEAVY DEMAND
There was a heavy demand for Bank of Canada shares throughout to-day with subscriptions reaching the Minister of Finance by letter, wire and telephone. Indications were the issue of 100,000 shares at $50 each would be oversubscribed.

His Sloop Wins First Yacht Race

T. O. M. Sopwith, skipper and owner of the Endeavour, which led Rainbow, United States defender, in the first America's Cup race off Newport, R.I., to-day.

ENDEAVOUR WINS FIRST CUP RACE

CONGRATULATIONS

Endeavour's crew, once the canvas was down, rushed aft to congratulate Sopwith. Mr. Sopwith left the wheel to embrace Mrs. Sopwith, the timekeeper, and then returned to the helm. The decisive "break" in the closely contested race came soon after the weather mark was turned when Vanderbilt attempted to "back" down the wind and was unsuccessful on his wind-hunting expedition.

ONE RACE UP
In winning to-day Sopwith took a British hitch on the America's Cup, the series for which will be decided when one of the two sloops wins four races.

Vanderbilt, behind on the run home, shifted sail and apparently attempted to make a reaching match of it. Sopwith bearing right up for the line.

Looking for an extra puff of wind, Vanderbilt strayed off the course and, changing his mind, reverted to a running game.

Rainbow's spinnaker at this juncture split at the bottom, but it was not clear this had an important bearing on the result.

WIND AND RAIN
As the time for the start approached this morning the weather brought cheer to yachtsmen hoping for such conditions as would give the two sloops a real test, but it made rough going for the spectator fleet.

Frequent rain squalls reduced visibility to a minimum.

At 9.30 a.m. E.S.T., over an hour before the scheduled start, Block Island reported the wind was blowing 18 knots and freshening.

The two racing yachts, under tow of their respective tenders, showed considerable of their underbodies as they felt the swell of the open sea. Endeavour especially appeared to be making heavy weather of it.

T. O. M. Sopwith, the British skipper, was at the helm in Olinika. At 10.20 a.m., the course signals were hoisted on the committee boat. Wilhelmshafen, setting the course as 15 miles south-southeasterly against the wind and return. This was the same course the big boats traveled Saturday in the first race, which was declared no contest.

SAILS SET
Rainbow was the first to set her sails. She had a mainsail and staysails up, with another head sail up in stops.

With only 11 minutes to go before the scheduled start Endeavour had only a staysail set. Sopwith sent a man aloft to clear whatever it was that was keeping them from setting the mainsail and signalled the committee boat for a postponement.

At 10.40 Endeavour finally set her mainsail, with a short test showing near the luff along the Upper Batten. The test was very slight, however, and it did not appear to threaten the usefulness of the sail.

The 10-minute warning signal was set at 10.45. Both yachts were carrying mainsails and staysails, with head sails in stops.

Both also carried quadrilateral, or Greta Garbo, jibs.

THE START
Endeavour had to luff to clear the committee boat, toward which they were bearing when the starting signal was given, and lost way, but led Rainbow across the line by three lengths.

Both went off on a starboard tack with Rainbow in the weather boat. The favored position, immediately followed by Endeavour. Vanderbilt did not hold on the starboard tack for long, going about again within a few minutes.

The manoeuvre furnished the first proof of this contest that the United States yacht was ahead.

The breeze had moderated considerably, but the sea was still unruly. Endeavour was notably stiffer than the defender while the wind remained strong. Her long bow made hard work of it, alternately diving into the sea and then lifting clear.

RAINBOW TO WEATHER
At 12.15 p.m. an hour and twenty minutes after the start, both were on taken into custody at his office in the Bank of Commerce Building by Inspector T. W. Cousins of the provincial police and Detective Gavin Monahan of the city police.

The warrant alleged Mrs. Foley "did accuse two men of the offence of indecent assault with intent to extort money from them."

Chief Constable Harry Down signed the warrant for the two complainants, known as "Mr. B." and "Mr. C." The accused was held without bail to appear in magistrate's court to-day.

Foley's arrest was the fourth to result from Crown Attorney Norman Newton's inquiry into an alleged blackmail ring in London and other parts of western Ontario. Others held are Mrs. Mae Turnbull, her son, Frank Taylor, and his wife Rosa, all charged with attempting to obtain $10,000 through threats.

the por. tack, with Rainbow well to weather. The wind remained steady and the sea rough.

They had completed approximately half of the fifteen-mile windward leg at that time with Rainbow still holding a comfortable lead and in the weather berth.

Endeavour appeared to be footing faster.

AT HALF-WAY MARK
Rainbow rounded the fifteen-mile weather mark at 11.59.22 p.m. with the British challenger only twenty-two seconds behind.

Endeavour had shown a remarkable burst of speed during the last mile of the windward leg. She found a better blast of wind as she changed direction and quickly made up the gap.

FASTEST IN HISTORY
Rainbow turned the half-way mark in 20.04 after the start.

It was the fastest windward leg in cup history, the best previous record time being the 2:06.40 mark set by the defender Vigilant in the third and last race of the 1928 series.

Endeavour did much better in the strong breeze, which was as high as sixteen knots at times, than she did in the light airs of Saturday, when the first race was declared no contest.

Rainbow had led her at the fifteen-mile mark Saturday by two minutes forty seconds and increased that until she was leading by almost half a mile when the race was declared off with the finish line only a half a mile ahead.

ENDEAVOUR IN LEAD
At 1.17 p.m. to-day, soon after rounding the half-way mark, Endeavour blanketed Rainbow to go into the lead for the first time since the series opened Saturday morning.

At 1.20 p.m. Rainbow doused her parachute spinnaker and broke out a balloon. Vanderbilt apparently was fearful the British boat could outrun him and wanted to convert the run into a reach.

The manoeuvre appeared unsuccessful.

cessful, for after fifteen minutes with Endeavour apparently going away, Vanderbilt again broke out his spinnaker.

The breeze was diminishing and the sea becoming smoother.

At 1.45 p.m., the yacht had between eleven and twelve miles to go to the finish line with Endeavour holding her slight lead. Vanderbilt, attempting to take down wind lost valuable ground.

At 2 p.m. the two racing yachts were so far apart it was difficult to judge their relative positions, but it appeared Endeavour, having covered seven and one-half miles of the fifteen-mile run home, held a substantial advantage.

Vanderbilt, who had gone wind hunting, apparently had failed to find an advantageous slant of air and broke out a spinnaker to make a run for it at 2.10 p.m.

BY ANNA PETERSEN
Associated Press Staff Writer

Newport, R.I., Sept. 17.—The timekeeper of Endeavour, British challenger for the America's Cup, believes learning the lingo is the hardest part of sailing.

The timekeeper is Mrs. T. O. M. Sopwith, wife of the owner and skipper of the sloop with which Great Britain hopes to regain the famous trophy.

"Timekeeping is an important part of sailing, but I am not the least bit nervous about it," she said to-day. "I have been racing in sloops the size of Endeavour and smaller ones for the last five years. It is really much easier to sail large boats than the small one in which the boom comes about so fast and you must act with lightning speed.

CALLING SECONDS
"Timing for the America's Cup races is also much easier than some timing jobs I have held in England."

"Ten minutes after the course signal is given you have the warning signal—five minutes later the preparatory, and then the start. There are four guns in all. My job is to give my husband every half minute, then every quarter, then every ten seconds and at the last every second. This helps him to work out his start and to cross the line full on with the greatest amount of speed."

"It takes accuracy and concentration, certainly, but the really hard part of sailing is to learn the language. There are all sorts of tricky terms."

GREAT INTEREST
Newport, R.I., Sept. 17.—Despite the glamour attached to the name of the Sir Thomas Lipton, five times challenger for the America's Cup, more interest than ever attended his series of five Shamrock races is being shown in the current sailing controversy to-night between the Endeavour, British challenger, skippered by T. O. M. Sopwith, and Rainbow, the defender, skippered by Harold S. Vanderbilt.

Yesterday evening the mayor of Newport, Mortimer A. Sullivan, was host at a dinner to more than 200 newspapermen assigned to cover the races. Other guests were the officers of the coastguard boats patrolling the course, which serve a dual purpose as press boats.

DIES IN FIRE

Two Men Missing as Flames Sweep Areas of Timber

Associated Press
Sacramento, Cal., Sept. 17.—Flames sweeping California forests left one man dead, two missing, and thousands of acres of blackened timber and brush land today.

The body of George Nielsen, forty-three, of Grass Valley was found in a death trap in the Tahoe National Forest.

Nielsen and the missing pair, Irving Child, thirty-nine, of Nevada City, and Carl Reighnour, twenty-five, of Sacramento, were members of a fire-fighting crew of fifty caught between a high bluff and advancing flames.

The flames, which had burned over about 500 acres, still are out of control.

Germans Victims Of War Neurosis

Associated Press
New York, Sept. 17.—Germany was pictured today by Dorothy Thompson, the United States writer who was expelled from that country, as the victim of its own financial and economic policies.

"Wages are going down in Germany," she said, "and prices are going up. But there still is a lot of stonemasonry and masonry. Germans believe that every other country hates Germany, and really are suffering from a war neurosis."

ENTIRE WHEAT CROP CLEARED

Good Market For Canadian Grain Expected to Follow Drought Losses

Canadian Press
Quebec, Sept. 17.—Disruption of most of the world's excess surplus stocks of grain by heat and drought in the northern hemisphere last summer will result in the sale of the whole of Canada's 1934 wheat crop, according to James A. Richardson of Winnipeg, who sailed for Europe Saturday in the liner Empress of Britain.

"I don't mind saying the heat and drought of last summer in the northern hemisphere have removed most of the excess surplus of the world's wheat stocks," he said. "The stocks that are available are well distributed, and we have every reason to look forward to a good market for Canadian wheat for the next twelve months. There is every expectation there will be a very small carry-over at the beginning of the new crop year at August 1, 1935," Mr. Richardson said.

This year's crop, his opinion is, will be slightly larger than the estimate that have been made.

Ottawa, Sept. 17.—The correspondent of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics at Buenos Aires reported under date of September 3 that the new official estimate of the 1933-34 wheat crop was 256,125,000 bushels, as against the first estimate of 256,177,000. The balance available for export was 197,512,000, of which 119,368,000 had been exported up to August 31, leaving 78,144,000 still available.

SAYS INQUIRY WAS JUSTIFIED

Canadian Press
Toronto, Sept. 17.—Mr. Justice R. G. Fisher, in supplementary clauses to his report on the MacCaughin inquiry, declares the Attorney-General was justified in instituting the investigation into charges of Daniel MacCaughin, former Ontario magistrate, that two members of the former Conservative cabinet had attempted to buy him out of office.

His report found there was no evidence of sale or agreement in connection with the Orilla post. He stressed, however, that not only actual trafficking in office but even suspicion of trafficking must be avoided if the confidence of the public in the purity of the administration of justice was to be preserved.

Ancient Buildings Under Rome Church

Canadian Press from Havas
Vatican City, Sept. 17.—Archaeological discoveries of considerable importance are believed to have been made during repairs being carried on here in the basilica of St. John Lateran.

The repairs, which are being carried on in the central aisle, brought to light the fact that underneath are two Roman buildings, one superimposed on the other. Excavation revealed two halls and from inscriptions found tended to indicate the building was once a school and dates probably to the year 197 A.D.

SOLDIERS—THEN AND NOW

Written specially for The Victoria Daily Times
By DR. THEODORE GOODRIDGE ROBERTS

NO. 7

Willis O'Connor is still an A.D.C., but now to a Governor-General. He is a colonel now. Gibson is a colonel, too, in his home town in Scotland. And even his D.S.O. But I doubt that either of them has forgotten that he is entitled to the very select K.Q.B., or the night of its creation in a nameless shell hole full of water, mud and rusty wire. I got in first, and Willis, in trying to pull me out, came in second; and then we pulled George in. What with the wire and standing on one another's feet, we were a long time getting out. Conditions were still highly explosive. We might have each other and soon floundered into another hole. We gained our objective at last and found raiders all blackened up and ready to go. We found a company dugout and refreshments, and all was well with us.

Charlie Tennant was not very keen about trench warfare. He had been in two or three other wars. He liked to discourse and while discoursing keep his whistle wet. He looked like the Duke of Wellington—if the duke was as good looking as some pictures of him. Even as a lieutenant he dared to look like the Iron Duke. But there was nothing of iron about Charlie. His was the kindest heart on the western front. What with his kind heart and one thing and another he was found frequently in extraordinary situations. I went to his billet one night during one of his tours of duty as camp commandant. He was found indulging in a hot bath. He sat in his canvas tub with an air of pink dignity and a bottle on a chair within reach. His man brought a glass for me. Soon a colonel entered, full of spleen because Charlie had given him a worse bill than he had given one. Charlie, a colonel, all wet and cold, said it right out from the shoulder.

"Tut-tut," said Charlie, with soap suds in his hair. "Sit down, sir. Fetch a glass for Colonel Blank."

The colonel took a seat and a drink and complained that no camp commandant should treat a lieutenant better than a colonel. Charlie in his bath looked more dignified than many a king on his throne. He explained that he was not a camp commandant, but an acting-camp commandant, in a tone of voice which suggested that it was a better thing to act than to be a camp commandant. The colonel looked puzzled and took a second drink. Then Charlie talked in a lofty but general vein for a long time, with numerous quotations from the padded poets and the early fathers, and when the bottle was empty the colonel went on his way, after telling us that we were both dashed good fellows.

Charlie once lost a horse in an extraordinary way. He had tethered the horse to a large, complicated, rusty agricultural machine of some sort and entered a cellar to see a friend. In came a shell and hit the agricultural contraption, one great blade of which went up and came down on the horse's back. Charlie looked at his dead horse, then at the wreck of the rusty machine and he saw that the machine had been manufactured in Canada by the respectable Massey-Harris Company. "Damn those people," exclaimed Charlie. "Why don't they keep their blasted potato-diggers in Canada?"

R. T. Thorburn, Nelson, Dies

Canadian Press
Nelson, B.C., Sept. 17.—R. T. Thorburn, deputy registrar of the Nelson land registry office and prominent golf enthusiast, died suddenly here Sunday, less than two weeks before he was due for superannuation.

Mr. Thorburn was born in Hamilton, Lanarkshire, Scotland. From his native land he went to Portugal, where he was engaged in the spice trade, for about eleven years. Vancouver was still but a small village when he came to British Columbia. Turning down an offer to work at Vancouver when the urge to go south to California caught him, he secured employment in a rail and steamship office at San Francisco. Later he moved north again and was employed in a railway office at Vancouver, and still later entered the government service.

While in Vancouver he was moved to Kamloops, and when the war broke out enlisted and left for France. He was retained at London, however, and went into the Canadian pay and record department at Millbank, London. In 1924 he came to Nelson as clerk in the land registry office and in 1929 was promoted to deputy registrar.

The crowd was thrilled as the Princess gallantly stopped the royal car to permit a little girl, running along behind, to deliver a bunch of flowers to the Princess.

Appeals from the crowd outside York House finally were rewarded as one of the windows suddenly was raised and the couple appeared. Princess Marina waved vigorously and the Prince, blushing, also waved.

CENTENARIAN HITCH-HIKING

Salt Lake City, Sept. 17.—A 100-year-old hitch-hiker was a visitor here today, but he plans to "thumb" his way to Los Angeles soon to visit a daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Worthing.

Walt said he left his daughter's home in New Orleans, La., because of a family argument and hitch-hiked his way west.

The veteran said his mother died at the age of 118 years and his father at 120, but his grandfather and grandmother lived to be 147 and 149, respectively.

Eight Newspapers There in Grip of Eight Weeks' Printers' Strike

By JOSEPH DENNIGAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer
Dublin, Sept. 17.—Dublin's five newspapers—three morning and two evening—started their eighth week of silence today while deadlock reigned in the negotiations for settlement of the printers' strike.

This is an outgrowth of the original dispute between the publishers and the Transport Workers' Union, which struck in July for higher pay. When the transport men—packers, clerks, truck drivers and other semi-skilled workers—struck, the printers were given notice publication would cease. The printers claim a fortnight's pay on the grounds the notice to them should have been served at the end of a working week; twelve hours before it was received, and now they have voted three to one rejecting the proprietors' offer to arbitrate this question.

At the same time the transport workers have announced rejection by a small majority of the proprietors' offer of graded increases amounting to a dollar or so a week.

New Appeal To French-Canadians

Canadian Press
Montreal, Sept. 17.—Grave fears as to the survival of the French-Canadian race as a distinct entity on Canadian soil are felt by Mayor Camille Houde of Montreal. Speaking Sunday at a ceremony to commemorate the arrival in Canada of Jacques Cartier, Mayor Houde questioned the likelihood of the race's survival.

Always subservient to other people in things economic, the French-Canadians had become even more so since the arrival of the depression, the mayor declared, pleading with his compatriots to take more seriously the matter of cultural attainment.

Montreal, Sept. 17.—The position of the Christian church in Germany will be under discussion at the next World Conference on Faith and Order at Lausanne in 1937, according to an announcement made at the thirteenth general synod of the Church of England in Canada here. The world conference will be held in connection with the movement for reunion of all Christian churches.

Banff, Alta., Sept. 17.—Erected from stone taken from the towering Rockies which surround it, a memorial cairn to perpetuate the memory of Donaldson Bogart Dowling of the Canadian Geological Survey stands unveiled in Banff National Park today.

Members of the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy attended the unveiling ceremony Saturday, following the close of the annual western meeting held at Calgary.

A member of the Canadian Institute from 1904 until his death in 1926, Donaldson Bogart Dowling was president during 1918-19, and throughout his career played a notable part in the development of the mineral resources of the Dominion.

The bronze plaque on the cairn, of which F. W. Gray, past president of the Institute, was the sculptor, has an inscription reading: "His work on coal, petroleum and natural gas is a lasting inspiration to students of geology."

PREMIER LYONS SUSTAINED

THE GOVERNMENT OF PREMIER Joseph Lyons in Australia has been sustained with the loss of three seats, electing thirty-five to a new House of Representatives which will number seventy-four members, compared with the last House of seventy-five. The Prime Minister had hoped for a clear majority over all in order that he could be independent of the support of the Country party which had bolstered his majority of one since the election of December, 1931.

The result of the voting for the vacant half of the Senate will not be known for some time, the polling being through state-wide electorates instead of individual seats as in the voting for the lower House. There seems to be no doubt about the government maintaining its majority, as the Lyons candidates were leading on first preferences—proportional representation is the system in effect—in New South Wales, South Australia, and Tasmania. Labor is ahead in Victoria and Queensland. Western Australia is favoring the government.

Latest returns indicated that the final standing in the new Parliament will be as follows: United Australia (government) party, thirty-five; Country party, thirteen; Federal Labor, eighteen; Extreme Labor, eight; total, seventy-four. At dissolution six weeks ago, the party standing was as follows: United Australia party, thirty-eight; Country party, sixteen; Federal Labor, fourteen; Extreme Labor, five; Independent, one; total, seventy-five. The standing in the Senate was as follows: U.A.P., nineteen; C.P., six; Ind., one; Federal Labor, seven; Extreme Labor, three; total, thirty-six.

The Commonwealth constitution provides for at least six Senators for each of the original six colonies—now denominated the Original States—and they are chosen for six years. In general the Senate is renewed to the extent of one-half every three years, but in case of prolonged disagreement with the House of Representatives, it may be dissolved, and an entirely new Senate elected. The House of Representatives consists, as nearly as may be, of twice as many members as there are Senators, the numbers chosen in the several states being in proportion to population, excluding aborigines, as shown by the latest census statistics, but not less than five for any Original State.

Although Premier Lyons had a majority of one over all in the last House, he at all times could rely on the support of the Country party led by Dr. Earle Page in critical divisions. There is no reason to believe that this co-operative arrangement will be impaired now that the government must depend upon Country party support. While these two parties conflict at times on the matter of tariffs, they are both in agreement as to the desirability of keeping Labor out of office. It will be noted that the Federal Labor party, the more moderate elements, gained four seats, while the Extreme Labor party, under the leadership of the fiery former New South Wales Premier, J. W. Lang, gained three. These Labor gains under the two heads being at the expense of the United Australia and Country parties, both dropping three to the opposition.

A good deal of shaking of heads preceded the voting. These are not days in which governments in office are likely to obtain sufficient support to keep them in office. But in the case of the Australian Premier—not so in the case of Mr. Bennett in this country—an excellent record could be pointed to. For example, the Australian national income has risen to the extent of $300,000,000, and the last budget showed a surplus of $6,500,000, in spite of the fact that the cuts in the pensions and civil service lists had been restored.

An important point which Premier Lyons emphasized in his election manifesto, by the way, was that restriction of natural production would never be accepted by Australia as a cure for economic distress; on the contrary, he considered such a formula as a check on progress, which, by the same token, would threaten the solvency of the Commonwealth and the states.

Mr. Lyons, therefore, may take credit unto himself for being one Premier who, though not commanding a majority in his Legislature, is able to continue his job. He has won his election and the cricket team of his country has returned with the mythical "Ashes." He ought to be a happy Premier indeed.

THE MOUSE AND THE CAT

SWITZERLAND HAS MADE HERSELF ridiculous at Geneva at the present session of the League of Nations. Again this afternoon she reiterated her opposition to Soviet Russia's admission to a permanent seat on the League Council, her delegate declaring that Russian Communism seeks to take root everywhere, "and its ambition is world revolution."

To-day's outburst, of course, was merely a pawing of the air—a gesture which means nothing. Already a competent majority has invited Russia to join the League and Russia has accepted the invitation, acknowledging the privilege of being afforded a permanent seat on the Council. Great Britain, France, and Italy were the prime movers in Russia's behalf.

Switzerland is a happy little country of a little more than four million people. She depends to a greater extent than most people realize upon the money tourists spend within her territory each year for her economic existence. She now sets herself up as judge and jury on the matter of Russia's entry into the League of Nations. Russia is a country of 165,000,000 people, experimenting, it is true, in a form of government which evidently is anathema to little republican Switzerland. But this is not her business. When her delegate to the League this afternoon said that Russia's ambition is world revolution he could not have produced a ripple of serious thought among any present.

Russia, ever since Lenin imitated his new economic plan, has realized that the world refuses to revolute on orders from Moscow. Litvinoff, we would suggest, never has been under any delusion on this point. He is a practical man; but he naturally fell out with Switzerland when the Soviet minister to Rome, M. Vorovsky, was assassinated at the Lausanne conference, after which the Swiss courts saw fit to condone the act of M. Conrad, his murderer and a White Russian, by setting him scotfree.

It took some time to persuade Russia to take part in the preliminaries to the Disarmament Conference—in view of the Vorovsky affair—and she offered to attend if the meetings were held in some other city—Brussels or Vienna. Or, if the Swiss federal government saw its way clear to make amends—a sizeable monetary indemnity to Vorovsky's family, an expression of official regrets, and guarantees for the safety of Soviet representatives who might in the future be sent to Geneva.

It is a matter of history, of course, that, after a lot of fretting and fuming, Switzerland capitulated; but not until there were threats from influential powers that continued stubbornness might mean the transference of the League headquarters, the Disarmament Conference, and all the tourist business which results from everything connected with international dealings in the delightful city on Lake Lemman, through the natural course of events, to another country.

This was the point at which business Switzerland sat up and took notice. This afternoon's gesture, therefore, was rather silly and ill-timed.

WAIT TILL AFTER SEPTEMBER 24

PREMIER BENNETT INTENDS TO hold a conference with provincial Premiers and representatives next month to go into a number of matters, including financial and the question of amendments to the British North America Act. We are told that there is to be another session of Parliament before the government goes to the country, that Mr. Bennett intends to represent Canada, as her Prime Minister, at the ceremonies which will mark King George's twenty-fifth anniversary of his succession to the throne, and that while in London on that occasion he will take advantage of the opportunity to discuss with the British government and with the Premiers and representatives of the various Dominions who will be there also such business as may be connected with the operation of the Ottawa trade agreements.

Discussion of amendments to the British North America Act will be prolonged. There will be many conflicts in point of view. After a good deal of talk, it is quite likely that the meeting will "stand adjourned" on that subject, and that another Dominion government will have to take it up where the present government left off. Much water will flow down the St. Lawrence before an agreement is reached. But there are five good reasons why Premier Bennett should make no plans for another session of Parliament, either this year or next, or for doing anything about the discussion of the Ottawa economic agreements with other Dominion representatives in London next year. Those reasons are the five Ontario by-elections which will take place a week from to-day—in Toronto East, York North, Elgin West, Frontenac-Addington, and Kenora-Rainy River.

It is impossible to predict election results, but there seems to be a reasonable chance of the Liberals winning even York North, and a fairly certain chance in both Elgin West and Kenora-Rainy River. If the other two, therefore, should decide to send a representative to the House of Commons to support Mr. Mackenzie King, will Premier Bennett not consider that he and his government, in the light of what has happened in the provinces and in several federal ridings in the last year, no longer have the confidence of the Canadian people? Surely it would be a very thick political skin which would withstand such a prod as this.

Suggestions of a Union government, of course, need not be taken seriously. As Mr. Mackenzie King has pointed out—the next government at Ottawa will be neither a coalition nor any other form of government save a Liberal government.

The Prime Minister has had a very difficult task to perform since he took office four years ago. Not even his bitterest opponent could accuse him of shirking his onerous responsibilities. According to his lights he has acted for the best. But it must be patent to him by this time that his fellow Canadians think he has not acted wisely. Four provinces, including Ontario with a quarter of a century of Conservative rule behind it, have repudiated the policies for which he stands. The electors have told the same tale in the ballot boxes at Dominion by-elections in various parts of the country.

Until after September 24, therefore, Mr. Bennett ought not to make any definite plans which vitally concern the welfare of the Canadian people.

LEARNING
The Montreal Herald

Why does the chicken cross the road just ahead of an auto? Farmers report that fowl are cultivating a traffic sense and stop, look and listen, before entering the highway. One man says he saw a pheasant took out from a hedge and deliberately wait for cars approaching from both directions to pass and when the road was clear walk across at its leisure.

FINDING PLACES
Steele in Christian Science Monitor

Harvard School of Business Administration finds the trained young business man in increased demand. Of the 350 students who graduated in June, 300 already have been accepted for positions which start them at salaries ranging from $100 to $180 a month. Some sixty firms sent representatives to look over the senior class. Changed economic conditions are being felt in the academic as well as business schools. The college graduate is at last made to feel that the world needs and awaits him.

A THOUGHT

My brethren have dealt deceitfully as a brook, and as the stream of brooks they pass away.—Job vi 15.
Artifice is allowable in deceiving a rival; we may employ everything against our enemies.—Richelieu.

Loose Ends

It is bad in England, but out here employers don't want beauty choruses—Victoria's one law-abiding citizen utters a touching complaint—the hot-dogs undergo an unseasonable reformation—and an eminent K.C. has a melancholy thought.

By H. B. W.

SAD STORY

I HAVE JUST been reading a most moving article by a modern mother in The Daily Mirror of London, one of those intellectual papers which have such a wide circulation over these among the "intelligentsia." The poor mother's complaint has a universal appeal these days, for she is complaining of the trials of young girls in business. What she says might just as well have been written right here in Victoria. Hear her and weep:

"Employers now demand as a right that every girl in their office shall present an attractive appearance in the most up-to-date clothes, with hair, nails and complexion all bearing evidence of expensive care. Most girls can tell you of cases where the applicants for a post have been weeded down to the last prettiest, who were then paraded for a final inspection as if they were being engaged for a beauty chorus rather than a job of work in an office. A girl without make-up would be almost as conspicuous on a large staff as a girl without clothes. (Indeed, these days, she probably would be much more so.)"

"Knowing the salaries that short-hand typists have to accept nowadays, one wonders where the girl who is in work finds the money for all her cosmetics and beauty aids, and what about the girl who is out of work?" And this poor mother is horror-stricken at the thought of her young daughter going out of school into such a world, like a "painted doll."

Now, this is a serious problem. Yet somehow this cannot think this evil of civilization has yet penetrated into these remote wilds. I mean, I see no evidence of it. I see nothing in the external aspects of our offices here to indicate that girls are chosen for their good looks. Sometimes, indeed, I have the hideous notion that our provincial governments work on just the opposite principle, but let that pass.

If it be true that girls are chosen for their looks and appearance, it is a gross unfairness, for if their employers had to succeed on the same basis, most of them would be selling lead pencils on the street corners. But our local employers don't seem to work on that basis in the offices I visit. They want efficiency and don't seem to care about the scenery. This is fair and businesslike and safe, but often exceedingly dull.

LAWFUL CITIZEN

IT IS WITH some regret that I complain about our local constabulary, such good-natured, strong and hardy fellows. But is it fair that I should be singled out for their exclusive attention? I mean, what right have they to suspect me of felony and violence merely because I am felonious in this column?

About two years ago they fined me for driving past a school more than fifteen miles an hour, when the children were all safely in their classroom. The fact that I didn't do it was no defence. The fact that someone else was driving my car that day was no mitigating circumstance. My name was printed in the paper as a felon. I was held up as a grisly example to society, a man who drove over children like a juggernaut.

The magistrate felt, no doubt, that I should be locked up but, in the present state of the municipal revenues, merely fined me $20. This I paid without protest, with a simple dignity which I felt was rather fine. I may say that it didn't seem to move the magistrate or the police in the least. They get hardened after years of experience with criminals, I suppose.

SIDE GLANCES

By George Clark

"Drop in more often. You have no idea how I enjoy your conversation."

Well, ever since then I have refused to loan my car to wild drivers, and though there are four schools on my way to town, I slow down for each one. I creep past. I observe the fifteen-mile-an-hour limit implicitly. Yes, but do I get any thanks for it? Is my information recognized by the authorities? On the contrary, all the other cars speed by me, race past the schools, flout the law. Why, even the police, in their own cars and on their own motorcycles, race past the schools and leave me far behind.

I have come to the conclusion that I am the only law-abiding citizen in these parts. It is a pleasant honor; something for one's grandchildren to be proud of, but why am I singled out for this distinction? I do appreciate my eminence in the community, but being democratic by nature, I sometimes think I would prefer to be just an ordinary fellow.

GLOOMY THOUGHT

WELL, I JOURNEYED, as I had planned, to the fair on Saturday and went through the motions of a loyal citizen enjoying this great civic spectacle. I observed the dismal rite of eating a hot-dog, well smothered in mustard and onions, just as a sad reminder of the days when one could really enjoy it, and, alas, even the hot-dogs have deteriorated. That is to say, they are no longer served in the jolly old circumstances, with a barbarous lack of sanitation, in gypsy style. They are served with immaculate cleanliness, in a most civilized and refined manner, so that you might as well eat in your own home. It is a great mistake. It takes even that last-surviving spark of pleasure out of the fair. I think I shall never return again.

But it was not my private griefs that I wished to trouble you with. I am not going to waste your time either telling you how I happened to meet the children from next door and how they rode on the merry-go-round and the airplanes and the big wheel that takes you up close to the sky and, so they assured me, makes your tummy turn completely over; or how they had some ice cream on a stick, covered with nuts, and saw a lot of baby goats and some rabbits with real pink eyes.

We were standing by the merry-go-round, an eminent King's Counsel and leader of the local bar, and I, gloomily watching the children as they rode their painted wooden horses around and around. And as we watched, we talked about the present deplorable state of public life, the madness of the world in general, which had caused the eminent K.C. to stay out of politics altogether, and the approaching ruin of everything.

"Look at those kids," said the eminent K.C. gloomily. "Poor little beggars. See, they're happy. They're laughing. They think they're riding on real horses! But they don't know what's happening. They don't know that everything is going completely to pot. They don't know that the whole system is collapsing. They don't know our civilization is running down."

He sighed heavily and muttered again, "Poor little beggars."

We felt very contrite, as if we personally had assured the ruin of the system and the collapse of civilization and doomed these youngsters to a life of perpetual misery. Even a hot-dog failed to revive our spirits. And the children kept swinging by on the merry-go-round, bobbing up and down on their wooden horses, shouting and laughing, just as if the system weren't in collapse and civilization going to pot. They couldn't have been happier if the system had been working perfectly and civilization booming.

"The trouble with 'em is they never knew anything different from the present conditions," said the eminent K.C., sadly munching his hot-dog, amid then a tremendous idea hit him. "Say! Do you suppose they'll grow up accustomed to this kind of a world? Do you suppose they'll never suppose what a mess it is? Do you suppose they'll manage to live just as we used to, before things went to pot?"

"I shouldn't be surprised," I said. "If they would refuse to believe us when we tell them the jig's up." "Poor little beggars," said the eminent K.C. The painted horses went 'round and 'round.

TOUR PRESENCE
Just come into your presence,
Sensing your spirit's bloom
Is like stepping into the sunlight
Out of a shadowed room.
Never a care but lessens,
Never a joy but gains,
While the music of you remains!
Yours is the gift and the glamour,
Yours is the story and grace
Of starlight-falling whiteness
In a densely-wooded place.
Shadows may grow and deepen,
But wherever the starlight falls
Its gleam is as pure and perfect
As that within heaven's walls.
Never a grief but softens
Or a hope but waxes strong,
Just come into your presence,
The bloom of you, and the song!

THE VICTORIA DAILY TIMES

(From The Times Files)
Exhibits are now commencing to arrive at the buildings preparatory to the opening on Monday next of the great fall fair and horse show under the auspices of the Victoria Agricultural Society, and there seems every assurance that a huge success will be achieved in every particular.

Another gas explosion took place yesterday at Port San Juan when a man was blown forty feet from one of the gas buoys, which had just been recharged by the mate and men from the steamer, William Jolliffe.

Lord Northcliffe will likely be in Victoria about the end of the present week.

Major-General Sir George French is on his way here. He was the organizer of the Northwest Mounted Police, and one of the early explorers of the western plains. He is accompanied by his daughter, who is on her way to Australia.

Paul Accose, the Grenfell Indian, who arrived here seeking a match this week, will race Rowan, of Nainaimo, and Stanley, of San Francisco, at the Royal Athletic on Saturday next over twelve miles. The two runners competing against Accose will go six miles each, while Accose runs the dozen.

BEER PARLORS

To the Editor:—With reference to the protest urged by Dean Quinlan et al., addressed to the Premier, voicing their objection to the Liquor Control Board issuing a license for a beer parlor at the Lagoon Spit, and calling upon "all lovers of sobriety and opponents of increased drinking facilities to join in supporting their protest."

It would be interesting to learn why these preachers of the gospel apparently learn nothing from the teachings of Christ and His Apostles. In their narrowness they would injure a poor man and deprive those who don't look upon beer as a beverage any more harmful than ginger ale, soda pop, coca cola and other

HELP NEEDED

To the Editor:—Might I appeal through your columns for a family in need of warm winter clothing. The two children have to go four miles to school and four back. They at present are existing on $1.40 from cream each week, which will gradually get less as the winter goes along. The potato crop is almost a total failure owing to killing frost in June, July and August 27, when for the stock is short of requirement they were finally killed. The food owing to early very dry weather. They cannot sell any cattle as only one cent a pound could be obtained and selling at this price would only prolong their agony. We have done what we could, but help is needed. Address any help to Mr. Frank S. Sharpe, Rocky Mountain House P.O. Alberta.

YOUNG LIBERALS REJOICE AT TURN

Definite Trend to Left Seen in New Deal Administration

By RODNEY DUTCHER
Washington, Sept. 15.—Here comes the Band of Hope!

All the genuine New Dealers and the "young liberals"—which includes most of the brain trusters—would be parading down Pennsylvania Avenue, perhaps even burning red fire, if they followed their strongest instincts.

This jubilation is perhaps the most significant present fact in national affairs. It rises from a general belief that the administration is headed bravely toward the left, that the country is to have more New Deal rather than less, and that Roosevelt is at last definitely committed to a path toward Senator Norris, Justice Brandeis and Rector G. Tugwell, rather than a middle course sometimes veering toward Herbert Hoover, the old Fonda and Senator Byrd.

It has all come about in the last month or so and to appreciate the contrast one need only remember the early summer, when there were many reports that the mass of "young liberals" disappointed, was about to head back for the college faculties and law firms whence they came.

Well, hardly anyone has left—except a few disappointed conservatives. There is a new spirit among the leaders—which says this is the only place they have even a slight chance of fighting effectively for social-economic justice, and that they ought to stick until booted out.

Among the signs pointing to the left, they cite:

Certainly that NRA reorganization will be a "liberal" victory over Gen. Johnson and bear a promise of war against monopolists and exploiters, whom Tugwell calls "cannibals."

Closer, secret contact between Roosevelt and Justice Brandeis. Roosevelt's Green Bay speech and endorsement of La Follette.

The administration's new sympathy toward labor and the National Labor Relations Board's hard-boiled support of section 7-A.

Resignation of Budget Director Lew Douglas, who found himself no longer an effective conservative bulwark here.

Roosevelt's two-hour talk with Up-ton Sinclair after the latter's victory in California.

Boldness in admitting and facing this winter's tremendous relief problem.

Progress of the social security programme.

Increasing belligerence of "big business" against the New Deal, tending to draw the line of cleavage more sharply.

So there is an attitude of hushed expectancy—as of a regiment about to go over the top.

LONG AND PAINFUL
The conservatives will be pretty sore, but there will not be any satisfying the Socialists, who insist Roosevelt merely seeks to preserve the capitalist system on a workable basis.

Old Oscar Ameringer, the country's foremost Socialist editor, called the other day on his old friend Leon Henderson, director of NRA's division of Research and Planning.

Oscar is one of those fellows who thinks the Blue Eagle is just another buzzard and Henderson sought at length to convince him otherwise.

"So you see," Henderson concluded, "we've already achieved quite a lot."

"Yah," Ameringer retorted, "you remind me of a doctor I used to know and the way he was trying to cure a case of smallpox—"

"Pimple by pimple!"

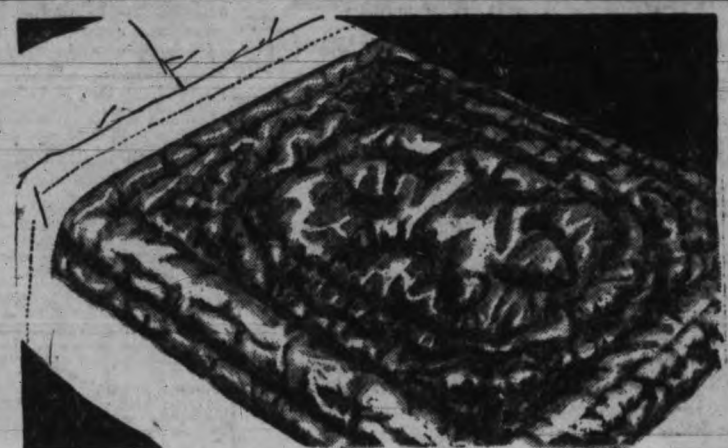

The great leader of the north, Abraham Lincoln, was a southerner. He was born in Kentucky and his wife, also, came from a southern family.

Come to Open the New School Year—and to Aid Fall Business in Its Pick-up

102% Greater Ink Capacity—A Visible Ink Supply—A Twice as Useful Point—New, Exclusive Laminated Pearl Style

In order to hold as much ink as this sacless marvel, an ordinary rubber sac pen the same length would have to be as big around as a cane. For the Parker Vacumatic eliminates 14 old parts, including not only the ink sac, but the piston pump found in other sacless pens.

So don't confuse this pen with so-called vacuum fillers built on outworn principles. Remember this is the only pen that has all the shimmering Beauty of laminated Pearl and Jet—the only transparent style with visible ink supply that doesn't look transparent.

Says Everett Gonthier (medical student)—"When we medicals used rubber sac pens, we had to carry bottles of ink to lectures and exams. The Parker Vacumatic has ended that nuisance. Do you wonder we've gone for it in a big way?"

Believe it or not—thousands more people every day are replacing their old-type pens with this utterly new creation because it does what no other pen can do for them.

Don't penalize your earning off learning by clinging to an obsolete pen. Stop today at the nearest pen counter and see how this pen fills Vacuatically with a double supply and a visible supply.

Try its Two-way Point of Platinum, Gold, and Iridium. Polished like a jewel, it can't scratch or drag, even under pressure. Go and try it today. The Parker Fountain Pen Co., Limited, Toronto.

Your Baby and Mine

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDERD

EXPANSION OF BABY'S DIET IS CONTINUOUS

The expansion of the baby's diet from breast milk or cow's milk alone to contain all the foods essential to proper growth and development is continuous throughout the first nine months.

It begins with the addition of some vitamin C food to the diet to supplement the limited supplies of vitamin C in baby's milk formula. Orange juice and tomato juice are given first and these may slip into the diet as early as the second month. Beginning at about the same time the vitamin D preparations become as much a part of the diet as the additions deemed strictly foods. Because of the varied nature of these preparations I suggest that mothers who do not understand the difference between plain oils, super D oils and vitamins send a three-cent self-addressed stamped envelope to this department and ask for the leaflet "Cod Liver Oil and Other Vitamin D Products."

CEREAL IS FIRST SOLID FOOD

Having introduced orange juice and cod liver oil during the first few months, solid foods appear on baby's bill of fare in the form of well cooked, delicately flavored wheat or oats, or one of the pre-cooked cereals designed especially for babies.

These additions result in a diet that will satisfy most babies up to the sixth month at which time egg yolk is included daily—not a whole egg all at once—I hasten to add. Some babies have a marked sensitivity toward eggs and would be made violently ill if fed a whole egg. Just a teaspoonful of hard cooked and mashed egg yolk, or soft cooked yolk mixed with bread crumbs is sufficient to determine baby's own reaction to it. If uneventful more egg can be added daily until baby can negotiate the whole yolk along with his 2 p.m. feeding of vegetables or in the form of custard using part of his milk allowance.

ONE AT A TIME

There is no particular rule as to whether sieved vegetables or egg yolk should be the first food chosen at this time. But one at a time is the rule. Vegetables can be started cautiously, in teaspoonful amounts, offered before the 2 p.m. milk and egg feeding, and baby's reactions noted. Carrots and spinach are still favorites, though many other vegetables can be tried.

To the parent who has carried out such a programme with intelligence and caution the reward is a healthy, hearty baby whose mental and physical development should keep pace with or excel that of any neighbor's baby.

To-morrow: "Deciding on Hospital or Home Delivery."

Paul Poiret Saved From Subsisting on the Dole

Former "King of Fashion" Rescued From Poverty; London Business Men Start Him Up Again

London—A group of London businessmen have rescued Paul Poiret, the man who was once King of Fashion, from the dole.

Less than six years ago, Poiret was acknowledged to be one of the most important dress designers in Paris. Then hard times came and he fell from power through financial difficulties.

But now his ill luck is over. He is being backed by a London syndicate who are giving him a free hand to make London the real centre of the world's fashion.

TO LAUNCH MODELS He is to begin work immediately and will design 200 exclusive models to be launched in London this autumn.

Poiret's new chance came as the result of a newspaper article revealing that he was "on the dole," which in France amounts to about 17s 6d a week.

In the article, Poiret made a frank admission of his poverty and disclosed that for the past eighteen months he has earned scarcely anything.

The details of his fall are pathetic. At the height of his fame, women used to throw themselves at his feet and beg him to "create" their clothes, not caring how much he charged for the work.

Then the business failed in which Poiret had invested most of his fortune. As a result he had to leave his wonderfully equipped studios.

Shortly afterwards he opened a new business under the name of a Frank telephone number. That prospered, but his financial backers decided his salary was too high, so they replaced him by a cheaper man.

Poiret was left almost penniless.

REPUTATION A DRAWBACK His savings slowly diminished. His great reputation, incredible though it may seem, prevented him from getting another job. No one guessed how poor he was for he still lived at his luxurious flat in the Faubourg St. Honoré. Not one knew that the landlord was letting him live rent free—for old times' sake.

After some months he launched a project for teaching women better

Married Flirts

"Going up now?"
He grinned at her. She was as tall as he. "Far as Seventy-second Street."
"I'm going as far as Times Square," she said, lightly. "I'll trail along if you don't mind."
"O.K. lady."
She tucked her bag under one taloned arm and tripped along beside him, her high heels clicking. Tom was conscious of admiring glances as they threaded the crowded crowd. No doubt about it, she was a good-looking girl. Funny she hadn't married. Of course she was always raving about a career but Tom had noticed that other girls who talked the same way plunged headlong into marriage when the fancy took them. And Vera had lots of beaux. There was always some Johnny on the telephone asking her to dance and dine and what-not.

They had to walk two blocks to the hooded subway entrance, jostling people as they went and dodging taxis at the intersections. The ride uptown, with the swaying cars hurtling themselves forward at breakneck speed through the tunnels, made conversation impossible. Just before the Times Square station was reached the girl touched his arm lightly and said, "Get out here with me, Tommy. And have a chocolate malted. It will only take a second. I particularly want to ask you something."

It would have seemed childish to refuse. He could have his soda fountain drink; he could go on uptown without feeling guilty. It was a matter of business—Vera was always demanding his advice. Gypsy, far away and in trouble, would neither know nor hurt.

They climbed on twin stools at a gleaming white and chromium counter. All about them was the paraphernalia of the modern drug store, the books, alarm clocks, costume dolls, rubber goods and nosegays, lollipops which form the background for one lone, lost customer where chemists ply their trade.

"What I want to know," Vera demanded after a white-coated youth had taken their order, "what I want to know is what I have to do to make you mad at me. Why don't you like me any more?"
"Me?" Tom stared. "You're crazy, girl. I think you're a whiz. Her curried smile had a tinge of wistfulness. "That sounds good," she told him, "but you haven't been a bit friendly lately. You've been—well, just horrid."

"What is it all about?" Tom took a sip of ice water and tried to make his humor hearty. "I must have done something—said something," Vera offered plaintively. "I wish you'd tell me. I'm so fearfully hurt about it."
"Maybe I'm crazy," Tom said good naturedly. "I don't know what you're driving at. I'm not mad at you. You haven't done anything to annoy me, and shall we talk about something else?"

Her eyes were dewy. "Sure, Tommy."
"Absolutely!"
"I'm so terribly glad," she whispered softly. "Because you know what it's always meant to me, having you about, don't you, Tommy?"
The man's heart sank. What was he letting himself in for now?

CHAPTER XXXV

No one met Tom Weaver at the station that night. He swung up the steep street away from the station, a frown creasing his brow. Of course he hadn't expected Gypsy to come... but he did fear the news that might greet him at the big house in Upper Dean Street.

The spring twilight was full of pleasant sounds. Birds chirped in the budding trees and children played convalescence. Gypsy and Tom moved back to the apartment in the middle of the second week to take up their own problems again. By that time Harvey Morrell was sitting up, propped by pillows, in the big four poster. The morning before she went back to the city Gypsy had a talk with her father. The nurse had left the day before and Gypsy had brought up his midmorning cup of broth. All the windows were opened wide this morning to the bright spring sunshine. The curtains moved fitfully and just below the sill at Gypsy's elbow an old gnarled blue bush had burst unexpectedly into blossom.

"Grand day!"
Her father nodded, his dark face smiling. "You're leaving us?"
"This afternoon," she told him. "It will be less work all around. I feel I can safely trust you to mother."

He shared an ancient joke to the effect that Gypsy was the family protector.
He drained the cup with the invalid's characteristic sigh.
"Good?"
"Wonderful."

She made him more comfortable among the pillows. "Miss your nurse?"
He grinned. "I can spare that woman. She was a bit too bossy."

He was silent for a few moments. Then he said, hesitatingly, "You are right, Gypsy?"
"Yes, of course, why?"
"I just wondered."

She flushed. Daddy was smart. You seldom fooled him about anything. He had noticed the last time he had been to see them the coolness between her and Tom?

"Of course, I'm all right. Haven't I got everything in the world?"
"I guess so,"
"Just don't worry about anything but getting strong," Gypsy advised, patting his hand. "Daddy," she paused, not knowing quite how to go on. "Tom and I have a little money saved," she said awkwardly. "He told me—he wanted me to tell you it was yours if you need it now."

"Why, that's—that's awfully good," the man in the bed blinked twice and swallowed hard. "Thanks, dear. I'll remember that. I think we can get by. It's mighty lucky I kept up that disability insurance. It's paying me $40 a week right now and I guess we can keep our heads above water. Keep your money, child. You'll need it. Guess you'll be wanting a house of your own one of these days. Tell Tom I appreciate his kind thought."

She turned the covert straight and twisted to go but he detained her.
"You get a lot of time to think, lying here as I do," he said slowly. "Can't tell you how glad I am that you're settled, taken care of. I don't have to worry about you. Tom's a good boy; he'll go far if he's handled right."

"You married young, didn't you, daddy?"
"Yes, I did. We had a struggle at first—always have had, as a matter of fact. I never was a ro-getter. His smile was wry. "But your mother's been fine. She never asked for more than I could give. Not many women like her. And she was used to lots, too."

"Marriage is—funny," Gypsy offered vaguely in the pause. "It's never quite what you think it's going to be."

"Of course not! Of course not. It begins with a party, everybody singing and throwing flowers. Pretty soon the boy and girl have to worry about the bed and rent money. Not the same thing at all. But if they're the right sort—they'll come through."

Gypsy patted his hand. Daddy was good. He knew what life was all about. Maybe she was taking the whole thing too seriously.

Cause of Engine Trouble On Ocean Flight Explained

TWO AVIATORS landed in a twin-engine biplane at Heston Airport, London, recently. They had flown from Wasaga Beach, on Georgian Bay, Ontario—3,500 miles away—in thirty hours fifty minutes. They had accomplished the first Canada-England flight by airplane and one of the quickest transatlantic crossings yet made. Yet their first words on landing were: "Well, the show is a wash-out. Such is the advance of aviation."

Captain Leonard Reid and J. R. Ayling were dissatisfied because they had not gone on flying for another 8,000 miles. Their object when they left Canada, was to reach Baghdad, a distance of 8,300 miles from the starting point, and thereby to wrest from France the world record of 8,567 miles for distance flown by an airplane, non-stop, in a straight line. Consumption of fuel much greater than had been scheduled and a readily comprehensible doubt whether the fuel remaining in the tanks would suffice decided the fliers to make the premature descent.

The crossing of the ocean was a severe test of aerial navigation. For eight hours the airplane flew through mist and low clouds, obliging the aviators to depend entirely on their instruments. The strain of this head-on course in these conditions led them to reduce the "spoil" at the controls from three hours to two for each pilot in turn. An hour before reaching the coast of Ireland they discerned a break in the clouds below and descended from a height of some 5,000 feet to about 150 feet above the water.

Fuel consumption went up in curious circumstances, which were not fully explained till after a few minutes' examination and consultation at Hatfield airport. The headquarters of the De Havilland Company. Each of the Gipsy Major 130 h.p. engines in the airplane is fitted for maximum power output with forward-facing air intakes; intakes warmed by a flame-trap device are used at cruising speeds. This device gives a smooth and economical running, and also prevents freezing of moisture in the carburetion system. As set in the record machine, the flame-trap induction system operates up to an engine speed of 2,150 r.p.m.; above that speed the forward-facing intakes come into action.

FREEZING SENDS UP FUEL CONSUMPTION

AFTER a most satisfactory take-off and initial climb, the engines were set to run at 2,175 r.p.m., a rate demanded by the heavy load on board. After a time both engines began to lose speed and the throttle controls stiffened. The aviators, overlooking the possibility that freezing was responsible, did the natural thing. They opened the throttles wider, instead of closing them slightly to reduce the engine speed to less than 2,150 r.p.m., thus bringing in the flame-trap mechanism. With wide throttles, the trouble persisted all through the ocean crossing, and fuel consumption went up.

Over Ireland Reid and Ayling conferred. They checked up roughly the fuel remaining in the tanks and decided that not enough was left to complete a journey of 6,000 miles. So they landed in good shape at Heston and later flew on to Hatfield. There the tanks were found to contain 190 gallons of fuel, sufficient, if the aviators had known, to have carried them far enough to break the coveted record. Actually, though their fuel consumption was much greater than expected, unusually favorable winds over the ocean had brought them across in quick time and they arrived over England five hours earlier than scheduled. Those favorable winds persisted across Europe and along the route to Baghdad. Few fliers have had worse luck.

FIVE TAKE-OFF

Their machine, named "Trail of Caribou," is the De Havilland Dragon long-range biplane which belonged formerly to Mr. and Mrs. Molison, who called it "Seafarer." Its performance on this latest flight was impressive. With normal load on board a dragon weighs 4,200 pounds. Reid and Ayling, piloting most skillfully an airplane laden with 600 gallons of fuel up to 7,500 pounds—nearly one and one-half tons more than full load—took the "Trail of the Caribou" off Wasaga Beach after a

YES, HE HEARD WHAT THEY THINK

New York, Sept. 17.—Dick Himber, orchestra leader, is a curious fellow who likes to know what people think of him. The other morning he had his secretary call every music publisher in town and announce that her employer had died unexpectedly that morning. Himber listened in on an extension wire, and heard of his business acquaintances express surprise and polite regret.

It was not until they learned of his little joke, however, that he learned what they really thought of him.

WEATHER AIDS CONCERT CROWD

Large Audience Hears Last of Canadian Legion Band Appearances at Park

Basking in yesterday's delightful sunshine, several hundred people applauded the last of the Sunday summer band concerts presented by Bandmaster Charles A. Raine and his Canadian Legion Band in Beacon Hill Park. A well selected programme of classic and martial airs was offered by the band and the afternoon was concluded with the singing of the hymn, "God Be With You." Included in the concert were four numbers which the band played as test pieces in the amateur, fraternal and professional classes at the Canada Pacific Exhibition band concert. In the two former classes the band won second place on Labor Day.

Yesterday's programme was played in two parts. The selections of the first part were: March, "Distant Greeting" (Doring); overture, "Grandiose" (De Lamatre); waltz (A.), "Where My Caravan Has Rested" (Lohr); (B.) "Rose in the Bud" (Dorothy Foster); selections from "Carmen"; march, "Ocean Star" (F. Casson). The numbers from Elmer's "Carmen" were popular favorites. Blankenburg's march "Territorial" opened the second half of the programme and was followed by "Torch Dance in B Flat" (Pachetians), selections from Wagner's works, air varie, "Eventide" (Rimmer), and march, "Thunderer" (Souza).

Unions Face Powerful Foe In Aluminum Plants Strike

Above is a scene in one of the Aluminum Co. of America plants, with molten metal being poured in one of the processes of aluminum manufacture.

With a steam shovel in operation and a dinky engine standing ready with its train of cars, bauxite is being mined here by the open pit method on land of the Aluminum Company of America in Arkansas.

Pittsburgh, Sept. 17.—The average man thinks of the strike against the Aluminum Company of America as a strike against "Andy Mellon's company."

That wants to be made clear. First, the Aluminum Company is by no means the largest of the Mellon companies. Its quarter billion dollar assets are dwarfed by Gulf Oil and the Koppers companies.

Second, officials of the Aluminum Company here will assure you that the whole Mellon family owns only about 33 per cent of the stock in the Aluminum Company, and that by far the largest single block, about 25 per cent, is that of the estate of Charles M. Hall, brilliant Oberlin college student who discovered the process on which the output of the Aluminum Company is based.

So it is highly doubtful whether official stock control of this huge corporation rests in the Mellon family at all though in most such corporations a holding of 30 per cent is ample for actual "working control."

Despite the figures, no one here questions the domination of Mellon interests over the Aluminum Co. TWO OF FAMILY ON BOARD

A. W. Mellon, the former secretary of the treasury, does not sit on the board of directors, and since the death of his brother, R. B. Mellon, only two of the Mellon family remain on the board. They are Richard K. Mellon, son of R. B., and David K. E. Bruce, the husband of Andrew Mellon's daughter, Ailes.

In the popular view, the Aluminum Company is the world's tightest monopoly—the "Aluminum Trust." Whether this is true would better be left to the courts to decide. They are now trying to do so in a suit by the Bauxite Machine and Tool Co., a competitor, which has just won a retrial of monopoly charges.

Attorney-General Homer S. Cummings, who used to represent the Bauxite people, is supposed to be considering anti-trust proceedings against the huge corporation. Its officials, however, contend that since its basic patents expired many years ago, there is nothing to prevent any competitor from going into business against it.

Certainly the Aluminum Co. is a beautifully integrated industry from the industrialist's point of view, and a great part of its utter dominance of the field lies in the fact that it practically created the field itself.

MELLONS DEVELOPED FIELD When Charles Martin Hall, the student, invented the process for extracting aluminum from bauxite clay, he didn't know where to go from there. He hadn't any money, and nobody wanted his aluminum if he had been able to make it.

That was where Andrew and R. B. Mellon came into the picture. They had the money. They built the small plant where Hall began to make the new metal (it had formerly been a curiosity, even used for jewelry).

It was their money and their business ability that developed markets and made possible research into new alloys and uses for the metal. For aluminum is a metal which, coming into the industrial picture late, has gradually supplanted other materials.

And it is in the "know-how" of these new alloys and processes that the Aluminum Co. "monopoly" lies, as much as in its ownership of most of the best deposits of bauxite in this country and South America.

DISPLAY ENDS ANNUAL FAIR

Thousands View Fireworks; Attendance Figures Higher Than Last Year

A display of fireworks, followed by a carnival spirit on the Midway, brought Victoria's seventy-third annual fair to a close on Saturday night.

One of the biggest crowds in years attended the fair, and according to W. M. Davies, gate official, 8,010 people paid at the turnstile, as compared with 3,296 persons for the same date last year.

A new record was created at the fair when the paid attendance reached 30,150 for the week. Last year's total attendance was 25,910. The Canadian Legion Band began the festivities Saturday with a concert at 7:30 o'clock. Charles Raine conducted the band, which played immediately in front of the grandstand.

Punctually at 8 o'clock the first aerial bomb was sent off to signal the start of the fireworks display. Following the bomb signal, thirty lighted and red Roman candles were lighted and the fountain of Delhi broke into action. The latter was a gorgeous mass of colored lights soaring into the air from a fountain. One of the most marvelous fireworks was the illuminated beaver gnawing a log. Following this, wheels flashed round sending out sprays of light, a spectacular Niagara Falls display was set aglow, but the crowning feature was a battle scene between two naval ships, which bombarded one another. One was sunk amid terrific explosions.

The Union Jack and Canadian flag were also brilliant sights, while fountain sets provided fine sights between the more spectacular displays. Sky-rockets and ground flares completed the picture, while in a great illuminated sign the public was advised to patronize the midway.

GRAIN ELEVATORS SHOW NET INCOME

Winnipeg, Sept. 17.—Net income of the Alberta Pacific Grain Company limited for the year ended June 30, 1934, was $6,479,988 after providing an amount of $237,506.37 for depreciation; $168,934.28 for bond interest and exchange and $19,000 for other charges, according to the annual report mailed to shareholders of the company today. Subsidiary companies' losses assumed by the Alberta Pacific absorbed the net income of the parent company. This is the first of the financial statements to be issued covering 1933-34 operations by any of the large publicly-owned grain companies, and reflects a difficult period through which the Canadian grain trade has been passing in common with western agriculture.

The Alberta Pacific, with head office in Winnipeg, operates 373 country elevators throughout the prairie provinces in addition to a large number of coal yards and flour warehouses. Terminal elevators with a capacity of 6,585,000 bushels are operated by the company at Vancouver.

Value of the company's properties is shown at $7,668,169.28 with a depreciation reserve of $1,284,571.70. The report of the directors to shareholders, issued under the signature of H. E. Sellers, president, states:

"The balance standing at the credit of surplus account now amounts to $378,441.87. "uring the year under review properties were maintained in a good state of repair. Electric motors were installed in fifty of our Alberta elevators in a further effort to promote working efficiency and economy in operation. Two of your elevators were destroyed by fire and not rebuilt as the communities in which they were located are served with sufficient grain handling facilities under prevailing conditions.

"Bank loans of $4,306,000 show a slight reduction from a year ago. These loans were necessary for the carrying of stock of grain in elevator. The company is protected in the carrying of this grain through sales for future delivery.

"During the past four years the company has been operating under

NO MORE DRINKS FOR THIS MAN

New York, Sept. 17.—Sometime practical jokes are funny, though cruel. Diplomats always suffer from Broadway's idea of levity. While a circus was in town, a platter-tipped Ubangi native was secreted in the hotel room of a theatrical agent who always reeled home drunk. The victim wound up in a hospital and, the W.C.T.U. would be glad to know, has not touched a drop since.

the necessity of recovering from an impaired working capital position, while at the same time maintaining its properties and meeting bond interest and sinking fund charges. Bondholders have not approved the suspension of the sinking fund for a period of three years ending June 30, 1936, on the understanding that no dividends shall be paid on the company's shares while any sinking fund payments are in arrears. In consequence the June 1, 1934, sinking fund payment was not met.

"The crop being harvested in Alberta will exceed 1933 production, but due to drought a large area of western and central Saskatchewan and central eastern Alberta served by your elevators, is again without any appreciable amount of grain to market."

Officers and directors of the company are: H. E. Sellers, president; J. A. Murray, vice-president and general manager; Cecil Lamont, secretary, all of Winnipeg. C. J. Bingley, Calgary, treasurer; Lawrence Killam, Vancouver; C. W. Bond, Toronto; A. F. Guller, Montreal; H. W. Webster, Winnipeg.

The annual meeting of the company will be held in Calgary, October 16.

CAN VEGETABLE MIXTURES FOR SOUPS AND SALADS

By MARY E. DAGUE

Now is the time to find market bargains in vegetable odds and ends that can be canned and bottled in appetizing combinations for winter use in chutneys, preserves, soups and salads. A little of this and a smidgin of that will produce some astonishingly palatable flavors to brighten the long winter days that will be here before we know it.

An excellent soup mixture to add to meat stock is made by filling a sterilized jar with layers of all the vegetables at hand. Late peas, beans, carrots, corn, celery, okra, tomatoes, onions, turnips, cauliflower and cabbage can be used. The mixture is canned according to the usual hot-pack method processing the cans for the period required by the vegetable needing the longest time.

CAN SALADS, TOO

Salad mixtures canned in slightly sweetened vinegar are fresh and delicious—tasting when served in the winter with plain French or mayonnaise dressing. They are good, too, added to jellied salad. Lima beans, small uncut beans, carrots, red and green peppers, silver skinned onions and cucumbers are particularly good for this purpose. With the exception of cucumbers which should be soaked overnight in salt solution, the vegetables are prepared as for canning. When vegetables are ready pack them in sterilized jars and pour over a solution made by bringing to the boiling point ½ cup sugar, ½ cup water, 2 cups vinegar and 2 teaspoons salt. Process in hot water bath for thirty minutes or at ten pounds pressure for ten minutes.

SOUP MIXTURE

One cup lima beans, 1 cup corn cut from cob, 1 cup diced carrots, 1 cup diced celery, 1 small onion minced, 4 cups diced tomatoes, 2 teaspoons salt, 1 tablespoon minced parsley. Prepare vegetables as for the table.

Combine and bring to the boiling point. Add salt and boil five minutes. Pack in sterilized jars, half seal and process in hot water bath for three hours or under ten pounds pressure for forty-five minutes.

Of course this combination can be varied to suit the vegetables at hand, but tomatoes should be included in all mixtures, as their acidity aids in preserving the vegetables.

TO-MORROW'S MENU

Breakfast: Sliced peaches with cereal and cream, creamed dried beef with browned tomatoes, popovers, milk, coffee.

Luncheon: Vegetable soup, toasted cheese sandwiches, tapioca cream pudding, milk, tea.

Dinner: Lamb pie, creamed new turnips, hoppedew and stuffed pepper salad, plum cobbler, milk, coffee.

Forty Per Cent Of First Choices Win

Favorites Have Good Winning Average in First Week at Willows Track; Sena Leads Jockeys; Verna Loan Wins Again

The first week of the current race meet at the Willows track came to an end on Saturday and the ponies started to-day on another seven days of gallops at the five-fifths of a mile enclosure.

Racing for the last week was of a high order with twenty public favorites taking the major share of the purse out of the forty-nine events. This means just over 40 per cent of the first choices won their heats, which is a high proportion for any track. Of the twenty-nine betting choices which did not win, fifteen ran in the money.

Despite heavy track conditions, which very often make for runaway races and easy victories for mud-runners, there were twelve finishes of a close variety. That is to say, either a nose, neck or head separated the winner and place horse.

SENA LEADS RIDERS
With George Burns out of the running due to injuries sustained when he was carried into the fence after the finish of a race on Monday, apprentice Tim Sena led the riders for the week with ten winners in thirty-nine mounts.

W. Robertson, with seven winners, was close behind, and he displayed a marked superiority in distance riding. Following is the standing of the jockeys for the week:

Few Deer Are Brought Down

Bush Reported Too Dry For Good Hunting; B. H. Woolston Gets 130 Pounder

Victoria's hunters took to the hills in force over the week-end, but according to a check up made early to-day, returned to town with few trophies. Officials of the game department reported few bucks brought in, and stated the country was still too dry for much hunting. Several deer had been sighted at a distance, but few shots were available.

B. H. Woolston, proprietor of the Sylvester U Drive Limited, who has put up a challenge cup for the largest buck shot on Vancouver Island this season, stated eight had been brought in for weighing, the biggest being shot by B. H. Woolston, whose kill topped the scales at 130 pounds.

Sylvester and his party brought down half a dozen from the Shalvigan Lake area, while Claude Robinson, another hunter, was in the Highlands. The deer were reported to be keeping down, but fair shooting was expected with a little more moisture in the bush.

Sylvester's competition will be open until November 30, the end of the buck season. Night drivers coming in on the highway and from Shawinigan reported seeing several animals on the road going down to drink. The majority were does.

CHAMPIONS KEEP TITLE

Albions Defeat Victoria to Retain Cricket Honors; Bryden Gains Century

Passing the opposition's total of fifty-six with seven wickets standing, after the first had fallen for a duck, Albions on Saturday retained the Victoria and District Cricket League Championship they won last year, defeating Victoria by 60 runs at Macdonald Park.

The feature of the game was the bowling of Brock and E. D. Freeman, who took six for 15 and four for 17 runs respectively. Victoria was unable to make any headway against the Albions' bowling, the entire team being retired for 56, a duck, Maurice and N. P. Fite knocked out enough runs to win the encounter, the former getting 37 and the latter 24. The team went on to put up 125 before the last wicket fell. Penderay was the best bowler for Victoria, taking five wickets for 37 runs, while Craddock led the team's runs, taking four wickets for 12 runs.

BRYDEN SCORES CENTURY
After retiring the wanderers for 32 runs, seventeen of which were scored by Jones, Penderay went ahead to put up 141, with Jack Bryden scoring his second century of the season in the match at Mount Toimie.

Wenman bowled well for the Albions, taking four wickets for 12 runs, while Gee and Swower each took three.

PROPER DIET CAN KEEP HEARING IN OLD AGE

Most of Us Have Come to Expect Deafness in Later Years, but We May Forestall It by Care of Digestion

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN

Hardness of hearing has long been recognized as almost inevitable in old age, but you can forestall it considerably by eating properly and keeping your system in good condition.

Hardness of hearing in old age appears in two varieties. The distinction depends on whether the changes that have taken place in the tissues affect the middle ear or the internal ear.

The ear and the organs associated with hearing actually include three parts: The external ear, which is everything outside the eardrum; the middle ear, which includes certain little bones associated with transmitting vibrations from the eardrum to the internal ear, and which includes the very fine organ and nerve endings associated with the sense of hearing.

Hardness of hearing associated with old age usually comes on between fifty-five and sixty-five. One ear specialist says it is characterized by a lowering of the upper tone limit of hearing.

Apparently the human being makes little use of his sense of hearing for the very high tones of sound, and that perhaps explains why the sense of hearing for these very high tones is the first to disappear.

In many cases, says this expert, the onset of hardness of hearing in the aged is associated with a disturbance of intestinal digestion. The person concerned feels particularly that more careful attention to the food taken and to regular elimination of the bowels would prevent onset of these difficulties of hearing.

There are also technical methods which can be used by the specialists in diseases of the ear and which are helpful to such patients. These include regular clearing of the entire hearing tract and use of mechanical devices for stimulating the organs of hearing.

In many instances proper attention to the diet and hygiene of rather elderly people who have lost part of their sense of hearing and proper scientific medical attention have resulted in considerable improvement. Many of the elderly people who come for such help are satisfied if they are helped enough so that they can hear the bidding at bridge.

It is rather well known that the health and vitality of the tissues depends on a good blood supply and on adequate use. An organ or a tissue that is not sufficiently tended to wear out its ability.

Hence, any method of treatment that will improve the nutrition of the tissues and stimulate them to activity is likely to bring about general improvement in their functioning.

Toronto Thieves Take Away Safe

Canadian Press

Toronto, Sept. 17.—Thieves who entered the office of the Leader messenger service here during the night stole the company's heavy safe and used one of the firm's heavy trucks to cart it away. Contained in the safe were $1,000 in cash, $1,000 in cheques and valuable records.

Earl Carroll Success Here

There have been many musical and backstage pictures and there have been equally as many films dealing with the diabolical designs of fiendish murderers, but Paramount brings to the screen the first picture combining the two.

"Murder at the Vanities," the film version of Earl Carroll's successful current-season stage hit, at the Columbia to-day, mixes music and mystery for the first time.

With eleven of Earl Carroll's beauties, Carl Brisson, noted continental and English screen and stage star, Victor McLaglen, Jack Oakie, Kitty Carlisle and Duke Ellington and his famous orchestra, "Murder at the Vanities" tells of the premiere of a brand new musical show. The two stars, Brisson and Miss Carlisle, late in arriving, bring news that they are to be married.

Also shown as a second feature is "Sensation Hunters," starring Arline Judge.

Farrell MacDonald, James Donlan, Edwin Maxwell, Frank Sheridan, Fuzzy Knight and Vince Barnett.

Franchot Tone, greatly in demand by all the feminine stars who seek him as their leading man, surrounded his wealthy parents upon his graduation from Cornell by accepting a job as an actor at $50 a week. He now plays opposite Jean Harlow in the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, "The Girl From Missouri," at the Capitol Theatre.

The new picture, directed by Jack Conway, has a cast including Lionel Barrymore, Lewis Stone and Patsy Kelly.

DEBTOR JAILED,
ASKS FREEDOM

Wong Lock Is Having His Bond Paid For By Another Chinaman

A judgment debtor who failed to appear in court as ordered last week for examination before the judge as to why he had not paid his debt, was committed to jail, Sheriff H. W. Goggin, acting under orders of Judge Lampman, seized the man and locked him up.

The seized and jailed debtor was Wong Lock. The man to whom he owes money which he has neglected making arrangements to cover is Sam Louie.

As the law requires in such cases that the creditor pay the costs of keeping the debtor in jail, Sam Louie was called upon to put up in cash the cost of Wong's daily board and lodging in jail and also of his transportation. Sam put up the money.

To-day Stuart Henderson, counsel for Wong, appeared before Judge Lampman and applied to have the order of commitment to jail set aside. He argued that Wong was improperly and illegally a prisoner in jail. He pointed out that the judgment summons dated back to May 7 and that there had been a series of adjournments until June 29, when the judgment summons expired through the non-attendance of parties. Subsequently, the case had appeared on the September court list.

Frank Higgins, K.C., counsel for Sam Louie, argued that the commitment was in order and that the commitment order should be sustained.

Judge Lampman reserved his decision in order to study the case further.

As the law requires in such cases that the creditor pay the costs of keeping the debtor in jail, Sam Louie was called upon to put up in cash the cost of Wong's daily board and lodging in jail and also of his transportation. Sam put up the money.

To-day Stuart Henderson, counsel for Wong, appeared before Judge Lampman and applied to have the order of commitment to jail set aside. He argued that Wong was improperly and illegally a prisoner in jail. He pointed out that the judgment summons dated back to May 7 and that there had been a series of adjournments until June 29, when the judgment summons expired through the non-attendance of parties. Subsequently, the case had appeared on the September court list.

Frank Higgins, K.C., counsel for Sam Louie, argued that the commitment was in order and that the commitment order should be sustained.

Judge Lampman reserved his decision in order to study the case further.

A judgment debtor who failed to appear in court as ordered last week for examination before the judge as to why he had not paid his debt, was committed to jail, Sheriff H. W. Goggin, acting under orders of Judge Lampman, seized the man and locked him up.

The seized and jailed debtor was Wong Lock. The man to whom he owes money which he has neglected making arrangements to cover is Sam Louie.

As the law requires in such cases that the creditor pay the costs of keeping the debtor in jail, Sam Louie was called upon to put up in cash the cost of Wong's daily board and lodging in jail and also of his transportation. Sam put up the money.

BACKS LIGHTS
FOR TRAFFIC

Alderman J. Worthington
Favors System If Money
Available

"As far as Victoria is concerned, I would favor installation of automatic stop-and-go signs to a limited extent, providing our financial status merited the outlay required," Alderman John A. Worthington, chairman of the city parks board, stated following a visit to Seattle over the weekend during which he studied the traffic situation there along with matters pertaining to parks.

"In a large city they are vital necessities, but there were intersections there which carried as much traffic as Victoria's busiest corners where there were no lights," the alderman stated.

Alderman Worthington also went into the matter of flood-lighting after watching a double-header baseball game at the Civic Auditorium grounds in Seattle. The game could be seen as plainly as in daylight, he stated.

From Fred Rivers, former Victorian now in charge of the ticket department at the auditorium, he secured figures on costs of the flood-lighting. To illuminate the ground, fifty-four incandescent lamps, each rated at three 1,500-watt lights. Actual cost of installation had been $15,000 for the grounds which had seating accommodation for 12,000. Electricity used for one game cost $18, the alderman stated.

PARK IMPROVEMENTS

Alderman Worthington was particularly taken with the park improvements at the Seattle Civic Auditorium. On the side of Lake Washington, he had inspected a fish-rearing plant which would, when completed, include ten ponds, leading down to the lake itself. The government would supply those ponds with fry, he said.

Volunteer Park, housing the Seattle Art Museum, donated to the city by Dr. Richard Fuller, was another point of interest he visited.

The alderman paid tribute to the service of J. T. Unalugh, Seattle police superintendent, who had shown him every courtesy in his inspection.

G. Jennings Burnett Gets
Fine View of Sea Serpent Off Waterfront

Cadboroensis was seen off Victoria's waterfront last week-end. G. Jennings Burnett, 608 Niagara Street, organist of St. John's Church, watched him for about four minutes.

Mr. Burnett was strolling along the cliffs, between Dallas Avenue and Government Street, when he saw the monster.

In a signed statement to The Times this morning, Mr. Burnett reported his experience as follows:

"Any doubt as to the existence of the sea monster resident in the adjacent waters around Victoria, was completely dispelled by the evidence of 'caddy' on Friday evening. While walking on the cliff path, between Dallas Avenue and Government Street, I saw the monster for about six minutes. A disturbance was visible upon the surface of the sea about half a mile distant from the shore. Although the steady gliding movement, for a moment, it may have suggested a school of black fish or porpoises."

But the significance of the fact that the visible parts of the body that broke the surface of the water at four different places, moved as one, and the direction indicated one large creature. When first seen it was just beyond a large kelp bed that lies almost in the sea lane of the harbor. Although the steady gliding movement, for a moment, it may have suggested a school of black fish or porpoises."

"It was visible for three or four minutes before disappearing. In that time, and comparative nearness to the shore, its serrated back was visible, resembling the keel of a huge saw, about eight inches in height. The largest in the middle of the body. When it submerged it was slowly going eastward. In two minutes it appeared again. It was only visible for a fraction of a minute, and was seen by Mrs. J. Macdonald of South Turner Street, who was standing at the time."

Thousands of Inquiries Received at The Times
Office Each Day

Judging from the number of telephone calls received at the office of The Victoria Daily Times and the cheer that went up from the crowd following the progress of the race through the bulletin boards the victory of the Endeavour in the first of the yacht races for the America's Cup today was a popular one.

Telephone calls Saturday and today exceeded those on any major news event for years. On both days, from the time the yachts started, calls were handled at the rate of one every five or six seconds. Virtually every call over the telephone was regarding the yacht race and with all lines into the office used by inquirers interested in the race the number of calls ran into thousands. During the race it was almost impossible to use the telephones for outgoing calls, on account of the number coming in.

For an hour after the race to-day three men were engaged for over an hour picking up the telephone, automatically repeating "The Endeavour won by two minutes and nine seconds," hanging the telephone up to lift it off the receiver and immediately answer the inquiry again.

Outside the office crowds watched the bulletin board. Cheers and beaming faces when the result was known indicated their hearts were with the Endeavour.

"Yes," said Jack Metcalfe, "I caught this one all by myself. And it weighs ten pounds anyway. You don't have to have a bunch of fancy tackle to catch fish at Brentwood." Jack was visiting Eileen Metcalfe, 946 Colinton Street when he went on a fishing trip to the farm. The picture shows how proud he was.

MRS. PARFITT

Eloquent Tribute Paid at Funeral Saturday of Esteemed Resident

Eloquent testimony to the esteem in which she was held in the community in which she had lived for the last forty years, Mrs. Parfitt, who passed away last Tuesday at the Jubilee Hospital.

Rev. E. F. Church, pastor, officiated at the service held in the Metropolitan United Church, of which congregation she had been a valued and highly-respected member for forty-five years, and spoke eloquently of her sincerity and sweetness of character. Frank Tuppen sang one of her favorite hymns, "The Old Rugged Cross." Another hymn which was very popular with her, "Abide With Me," was sung during the service.

LARGE CONGREGATION

The large congregation at the church included many to whom Mrs. Parfitt had endeared herself by her kindly sympathy and generous hospitality. The City Council, Chamber of Commerce, many official bodies, citizens of outstanding influence and those walking in humble paths paid tribute to her. The abundance of floral tributes from friends far and near further testified to the widespread sorrow at her passing.

Interment was in Ross Bay Cemetery. The pallbearers were Arthur Lee, E. W. Whittington, W. A. Loney, G. H. Hall, J. M. Anderson and G. A. Girdwood.

GIRLHOOD ROMANCE

Mrs. Parfitt was born in Carlisle, near Bath, Somerset, England, on November 29, 1865, where she spent her girlhood. Her first husband, James Parfitt, whom she married in 1885, was a native of Scotland and had been a member of the Victoria Yacht Club when they were children attending the same Sunday school in their native village.

After her husband's death, Mrs. Parfitt came to Victoria with her two children, and lived for many years in the city. She was a devoted mother and a kind and generous friend.

She was a member of the Victoria Yacht Club and was a devoted supporter of the club. She was also a member of the Victoria Women's Club and was a devoted supporter of the club.

Sarazen-Kirkwood Win Golf Battle

Famous Pros Turn Back Phil and Alan Taylor 4 and 3 in Exhibition Match at Oak Bay; Kirkwood Thrills Large Gallery With His Trick Shots

Breaking up a match that was still squared at the end of the eleventh hole, three birdies in a row by Gene Sarazen and a birdie by Joe Kirkwood on the next and deciding hole gave the United States professionals a four up and three victory over Phil and Alan Taylor in the exhibition match at the Victoria Golf Club Saturday afternoon.

Up to the twelfth green, the Taylors, though perhaps not playing the golf they are capable of on the Oak Bay links, both knew so well, had been matching their famed opponents stroke for stroke, with Phil bearing the brunt of the attack which Sarazen particularly was making.

But on the 110-yard twelfth the American-Italian pro, who has been both British and United States open champion, sank a twenty-footer for a birdie four to put him and his partner in the lead for the first time during the match. And on the short thirteenth, Sarazen placed his tee shot within two feet of the pin for a birdie two. Again, on the fourteenth, he rammed down a twenty-footer for a birdie two. On the difficult dog's leg fifteenth, Kirkwood put his long approach shot almost dead to the pin, getting his birdie three to place his team in the lead.

All got par fours on the sixth, but flight before the first ball had ended. He hit off a watch, off a spectator's "cora," drove a ball perched by gum in between two other balls a distance of 250 yards down the fairway, used gigantic clubs and rubber-shafted clubs for humorous effect.

One of his funniest tricks was his hitting of five maulie shots in a row while all the time he looked at the gallery, smiling and talking and telling them it was just an old-fashioned prejudice that a golfer had to keep his eye on the ball. Kirkwood's slow motion swings were works of art and his illustrations of how to hit a ball were greeted with applause by some of the frustrated but enthusiastic golfers in the gallery.

While he displayed his birdie tricks, he kept up a running commentary interspersed with wisecracks and generally supplied a rare hour of entertainment.

The best ball exhibition saw Sarazen shoot the course in 67, two under par. Phil Taylor and Kirkwood were shooting between 71 and 73, though both had unfinished holes on their card, and Alan Taylor was a few strokes more than they.

THE OUT OF NOBIDE Sarazen and Phil Taylor missed four-foot putts for birdie fours on the long first hole. The same pair halved the second in birdie two. Phil also missed the two U.S. pros' par fours on the third. Alan came in on the fourth and fifth, halving the fourth in par four with his two opponents after he had nearly a putt from the edge of the green, and sinking a thirty-footer on the fifth for a birdie three to place his team in the lead.

All got par fours on the sixth, but

Lucky Goal Gave Sunderland Draw

English Football Leaders Get Tie With Aston Villa When Allen Puts Ball Through Own Goal; Matches in Britain Saturday Drew Huge Crowds

London, Sept. 17. — The grim struggle for leadership in the first division of the English Football League continues, with only two points separating the first five clubs.

Sunderland remained on top by a single point, which they secured in an exciting battle with Aston Villa. Preston North End, making a gallant bid for promotion, are still in second place, but Manchester City is now on even terms.

Only another point back are the Arsenal and Everton.

Bolton Wanderers, with Millwall the only clubs in the league who have won all their starts to date, remain safely on top of the second division, increasing their lead when Brentford and Burnley, the runners-up, both were held to a draw.

ONLY CHANGE Only change at the top came in the southern section of the third division. Newport County turned on Coventry City and beat them, 2 to 1, while Charlton Athletic and Millwall were winning, and as a result the latter two share the spotlight with Coventry. Millwall has a game in hand.

Tranmere Rovers had to battle New Brighton extremely hard to get the goal of the match which kept them on top of the northern section by a slim margin.

Aston Villa were fast and clever when they met Sunderland, the Astles scored in the twentieth minute. Sunderland never quit struggling.

the seventh, reassured the clubs in the gallery. Kirkwood put two balls in the water and picked up. Alan Taylor put one in the water and one on the beach and picked up. Phil Taylor put one on the beach. Sarazen's three won the hole against Phil's four and evened the match.

All got par three on the eighth and Phil Taylor sank a tricky ten-foot putt on the ninth to have the par three of Sarazen and Kirkwood make the battle all-square at the turn. Sarazen was out in 22.

On the tenth, Alan Taylor made what was probably the most spectacular shot of the match, though the gallery did not seem to realize it at the time. Far down to the right among the rocks on his drive, he played a completely blind shot over the hill, trees and bunkers to within fifteen feet of the pin. No one who watched the shot knew how it had finished up, and the others who had kept up to the left to see Sarazen and Kirkwood make their approaches could not see either the player or the green. Alan and Sarazen halved the whole in par fours.

As it came up for this, Gene cut loose with three straight birdies, and the Australian trick-shooter administered the coup de grace with his birdie on the fifteenth. The last three of the eighteen were played out, the sixteenth and eighteenth being halved in par fours and Kirkwood taking the nineteenth with a birdie.

The Americans' best ball for eighteen holes was 63, six under par, representing six birdies and twelve pars.

Sarazen, a small but stocky and compact man with a firm smile, impressed as being an automaton. His days with minimum of effort, and although hanging on to the lead, he was a bit of a puzzle. He was not a power player, but he was a power suggested by his following through on his shots.

He tried out the Oak Bay course five or six years ago.

for the equalizer which came deservedly when Allen was forced to put the ball through his own goal.

A crowd of 40,000 saw Arsenal beat West Bromwich 4 to 2, at Highbury Park. The visitors drew first blood, W. G. Richardson netting after several fierce Arsenal attacks had been repelled.

The champions fought desperately and James equalized in the thirty-first minute. Two more minutes and Richardson put West Bromwich on top.

SEE-SAW BATTLE Drake once more evened things up. Then Bastin scored for the Gunners. Boys crashed through near the end to put West Bromwich once more on even terms. Bowden saved the day for the champions.

The biggest crowd of the day, however, was that which saw the big London Derby between Tottenham and Chelsea at the Pensioners' ground, 50,000 turning out. The Spurs won 2 to 1. Tottenham scored twice within the first half-hour. Willie Evans sending in a cross-drive and O'Callaghan scoring on a short pass from Evans. But Chelsea scored the third off O'Callaghan's pass. Chelsea finally broke through with a goal from Russell, on a penalty.

Grimsby Town beat the experienced Huddersfield outfit by 5 to 1, on the latter's grounds before a crowd of 10,000. Grimsby scored three times in the first half-hour, with Jennings and Glover, the latter getting two of them. In the second half Betmied, the Grimsby centre, kicked the ball through his own net, but just to clinch matters, Glover got a couple more goals for them.

Glasgow, Sept. 17. — Clyde and St. Johnstone are still leading the pack in the championship race of the Scottish Football League with the champions Glasgow Rangers right on their heels.

Following Saturday's fixtures Clyde and St. Johnstone hold a one-point lead over Rangers, with Hamilton Academical another point back and Motherwell in fifth position.

The finest game of the day was at Hamilton, where the Acads played fast and exciting soccer to down Celtic, 4 to 2. Wilson, Reid and Harrison were the scorers, with McGorry and Delaney setting for the victors.

Clyde and St. Johnstone both had home games and both won by the odd goal, Clyde downing the Hibs, 2 to 0, while St. Johnstone beat Partick Thistle 2 to 1. Johnston scored two of Clyde's goals and Robertson the third in a narrow but deserved victory over Hibernian, for whom Walls and Moffat were scorers. St. Johnstone likewise earned their win. All the goals were scored in the first half, Tennant and Dickie netting for the home club and Miller for the Thistle.

Rangers kept half-a-game behind the leaders by beating Ayr United, 2 to 0, at Ibrox Park. McCall in the first half and Macaulay in the second were the scorers.

Motherwell slipped back when the Fir Parkers were held to a 2 to 2 tie at Aberdeen, and at that they were lucky to escape defeat. Armstrong scored both Aberdeen's goals, and MacPaddy Motherwell's.

Thanks to the marksmanship of Knox, St. Mirren scored their first away victory of the season. The outside-right, getting back after three weeks' absence, scored all three goals in a 3 to 2 win over Albion Rovers, recruits from the second division.

WHAT MEN Hate In Wives

WHAT ARE the faults that husbands most object to in their wives? Judging from the thousands upon thousands of letters I get in which men tell me of their domestic grievances, I should say that they are these:

First. Excessive devotion to her family on the wife's part. Refusal of the wife to cease being mamma's baby child when she got married. Wife regarding Mother as an oracle and always quoting Mother's opinion. "Mother says we should do so and so." "Mother says that I should not drink two cups of coffee for breakfast." "Mother says you should not belong to a club." Wife never being happy unless she has Mother and the girls in the house. Wife taking his money to support her father and brothers. Wife generally making husband feel that he runs a bad second to her family.

Second. Coasting to be a Lady Love. Throwing away the time which she caught him. Not thinking it worth while to curl her hair and put perfume behind her ears for a mere husband. Slaying illusion with soiled kimono and down-at-the-heel slippers and boudoir caps.

Dropping all of the cute little coquetties that snared him. Never telling him any more that she loves him. Never jolting him along and telling him that she thinks he is the biggest and strongest and cleverest man in the world. Turning the back of her ear for a kiss. Turning into a human refrigerator.

Third. Nagging. Never letting any grievance rest. Never ceasing to harp on any unpleasantness. Reminding him a million times of some mistake he has made. Never letting him enjoy any habit or taste in peace. Never failing to tell him at every meal how bad everything that he likes to eat is for his stomach. Not giving him as much liberty as a dog-on-a-leash. Always telling everybody that SHE is the one who has to do all the thinking and managing for the family, and goodness knows where poor Charles would be if it wasn't for her.

Fourth. Fault-finding. Keeping his shortcomings always before him. Criticizing everything he does and leaves undone. Correcting his grammar and his pronunciation and his table manners. Back-seat driving. Not hesitating to let him know that she regards him as a fool, and that she wonders how anybody with so little intelligence manages to make a living.

Fifth. Lack of companionship. Wives who have no time for their husbands after the first baby is born and whose whole interest thereafter is centered entirely on the children, with husband figuring in the picture only as a provider of perambulators and sport cars and college educations and party gowns for the girls and boys. Wives who would rather stay at home and watch Junior sleep than step out of an evening with husband. Wives who give up their music and their accomplishments as soon as they are married, who never read anything and who become bores to talk to.

Wives who will not chum with their husbands, who are never willing to grab their hats and go with them at a minute's notice. Wives who never make an effort to enter into their husbands' business, but who yawn in their faces when they talk to them about their hopes and plans. Wives who are always talking about their husbands' "old office" and who scorn their husbands' business, and who affect to believe the reason husband works so hard is because of some mental peculiarity that he can't help, poor creature. An obsession, you know, my dear. Too sad.

Sixth. Poor housekeeping. Keeping a house that is confusion worse confounded, where the beds are not made and the floor is unswept and every room looks as if a cyclone had passed through it. Never having meals on time. Ruining good food in the cooking and setting him down to mean that wreck his stomach and his nerves. Having to get up and get his own breakfast before he starts off to work in the morning. Seeing his hard-earned money go into the garbage can. Having his dream of a peaceful and quiet home, with a savory dinner ready for him when he came home tired of an evening, wrecked by his wife's laziness and incompetence and lack of interest in her job.

Seventh. Too much housekeeping. Being sacrificed to his wife's god of order and neatness. Having to come in at the back door because he might track up the sacramental front hall. Never daring to take a book out of its appointed place on the shelves. Never presuming to lie down on a couch, or rumple a pillow. Knowing it to be a high crime and misdemeanor to move a chair or use a guest towel. Having to smoke in the garage for fear of dropping ashes on the floor. Having a home that is just one "verbotten" sign from top to bottom, and that is the most uncomfortable place on earth.

Not being permitted to have even a corner in the woodshed in which he can do as he pleases and have his things the way he wants them. Having a wife who cleans up his den because it looks so untidy it gets on her nerves; who burns up his old pipes and throws his old coat into the ash can, and dumps all of his "horrid old specimens" in the garbage.

Eighth. Extravagance. Keeping up with the Joneses. Living beyond the husband's means. Having the bargain mania. Being clothes mad. Preventing a man from ever getting ahead by always keeping him in debt. Killing his hope and ambition. Selling him into slavery to dress shops and hat shops and grocers and bakers and candlestick makers.

Ninth. Lack of appreciation. Men claim this to be the greatest offense. Wives who take all that their husbands can give them without even saying "thank you."

These are the faults that men complain of most in their wives. Have you got any of them, Mrs. Wife? DOROTHY DIX. (Copyright by Public Ledger Inc.)

Uncle Wiggily's Pie Party

By HOWARD E. GARIS

Nurse Jane Puzzy Wiggily baked such fine pies from the apples of the tree which Uncle Wiggily had the elephant shake for him that the rabbit gentleman said:

"Do you think you could bake a few more pies, Miss Puzzy Wiggily? I want to give a pie party. You know, the first week of school for most of the children. I mean, the first week after the vacation. The Lady Mouse Teacher in the Hollow Stump School says her pupils are a real treat."

"Why?" asked Nurse-Jane.

"Well," said Mr. Longears, "I suppose it is because they wash it was still vacation. But they have been very good in school, so I thought some morning I would hop over there and give them a 'pie party.'"

"Will the Lady Mouse like that?"

"Oh, yes, she loves pie," said Uncle Wiggily.

"I mean," explained Miss Puzzy Wiggily with a laugh, "will she like it to have you break up the lessons by a pie party?"

WOULDN'T BOTHER LESSONS

"The pie party will be at recess time," said Uncle Wiggily. "Then it will not bother the lessons."

After a while the pies were all baked. Uncle Wiggily wished that the tree-shaking elephant from the circus might be there to smell how good they were.

"I would even give him one to put in his trunk," said the rabbit gentleman.

"What good would it do an elephant to put a pie in his trunk?" asked Nurse-Jane.

"Oh, an elephant's trunk is like his hand," said Mr. Longears. "Once he had a pie in his trunk he could put the pie in his mouth."

Uncle Wiggily hopped along, over the fields and through the woods until, with his basket of cute little apple pies he was near the Hollow Stump School.

"I'll sit down here in the shade of a tree and wait until the children come out at recess," thought Mr. Longears. "It would never do to have a pie party in the middle of lessons."

So the rabbit gentleman sat beneath a tree, placing the basket of pies near him. Uncle Wiggily intended to keep awake and listen for the sounds of shouts and laughter which would tell him when the animal children had run out of the Hollow Stump School to play at recess.

"But I think," said Mr. Longears, "twinkling his pink nose, 'that I can listen for the sounds of the recess run as well with my eyes closed as I can with them open. I'll do it.'"

GOES FAST ASLEEP

So he closed his eyes, not intending to go to sleep, for he knew it would not be long until recess. But before he knew it, Uncle Wiggily was fast asleep, and his paw had rested on top of the pie basket which sat on the grass.

Then, all of a sudden, a voice in a tree

over the rabbit gentleman's head whispered:

"I guess it's time for me to go down now."

There was a fluttering, flittering, swishing noise, and, alas! the basket of pies beside the sleeping Uncle Wiggily rose into the air and floated away.

"Ha! Ha!" laughed a voice. "What a jolly time I am going to have. Ha! Ha! Ha!"

Now just about this time Uncle Wiggily began to awaken. He thought he heard the sounds of shouts and laughter coming from the school yard where the animal boys and girls were playing at recess.

"I must take them the pies and start the party," said Mr. Longears, suddenly opening his eyes and rubbing his pink nose. But when he reached for his basket of pies—

Who, THE BASKET WAS GONE! and if the ear of corn will listen for the alarm clock to wake it up, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily's long chase with much more.

Big Ship Job To Be Done Shortly

V.M.D. to Install New Boilers on Ss. Estevan at Cost of $50,000; President Jefferson Due Wednesday; Empress of Canada Leaves Drydock

Contract for the installation of new boilers aboard the lighthouse tender Estevan has been awarded to the Victoria Machinery Depot. It was learned here over the week-end.

The contract price is approximately $50,000, and the work will take about six weeks. The job will not start until early in January, and will be done at the Bay Street plant of the Victoria Machinery Depot.

Employment will be given for six weeks to a large gang of workmen. Installation of the boilers on the Estevan was postponed last year.

It will be Wednesday before the American Mail liner President Jefferson reaches Victoria from ports in the Philippine Islands, China and Japan. She is bringing in a good list of passengers and a heavy general cargo.

The British freighter Ashleigh is to-day at the Ogdan Point piers loading 1,000,000 feet of Vancouver Island lumber for the United Kingdom. She arrived here Saturday evening, and will be here until Wednesday.

The Princess Marguerite and the Princess Kathleen will remain on the triangle run between Victoria, Vancouver and Seattle until the end of the month. It was announced this morning. The Princess Charles is still at the V.M.D. plant having boiler repairs made, and the Princess Marguerite, which will go on the West Coast run, is on a special freight trip to Alaska. The Ms. Motor Princess came off the Sidney-Stevan run to-day, after a most successful season.

A. F. Haines, vice-president of the American Mail Line, and the Pacific Steamship Company, accompanied by two daughters, came over to Victoria Saturday afternoon aboard the Orient-bound liner President Grant. Mayor Charles L. Smith of Seattle and Mrs. Smith also arrived here by the Grant.

Annual seasonal overhaul to the big Pacific liner Empress of Canada will be finished this evening in the Dominion government drydock at Esquimalt, and she will leave this evening for Vancouver to load for the Orient. She arrived here Saturday morning, and will sail on Saturday next for Honolulu and the Far East.

The B.C. Cement Company's freighter Susan was floated on the Victoria slipway in Esquimalt harbor this morning for inspection and annual overhaul.

Three Whalers Back From Northern Seas

Black, Blue and W. Grant Reach Port From Naden Harbor; Brown, White and Green Expected From Rose Harbor at End of Month

After a successful season in the open waters off the Queen Charlotte Islands, three whalers of the Consolidated Whaling Corporation's fleet, the Black, the Blue, and the W. Grant returned to their anchorage at the Point Ellice Bridge on Saturday. They came from Naden Harbor. The Rose Harbor vessels are still out, but will return here before the end of the month.

Capt. Willis Balcom had the Black this year. The Blue was in charge of Capt. John Fransen and Capt. William Hester had the W. Grant. Capt. Hester was top man of the three boats, bringing in a total of fifty-five whales during the season. Next came Capt. Balcom with forty-five, and third Capt. Fransen with thirty-five.

The Brown, Capt. Knute Halvorsen, the White, Capt. Harry Anderson, and the Green, Capt. Andy Anderson, have been attached to the Rose Harbor station.

EXPECT BIG TOTAL
The total catch and the number of whales to be taken by the three vessels will not be known until the Rose Harbor vessels return to port. It is expected to be well ahead of last season, when only four vessels left port, and they returned August 29.

Last year the four boats took 207 whales, of which 188 were of the sperm variety. Capt. Harry Anderson on the White, was top man, accounting for sixty-four of the whales. Three boats, bringing in a total of fifty-five whales during the season. Next came Capt. Balcom with forty-five, and third Capt. Fransen with thirty-five.

The whalers left Victoria this year late in April, which was about a month earlier than in other years. The weather has been good, the whalers who returned Saturday said, and the catches off the Queen Charlottes and in Alaska waters have been satisfactory.

The Consolidated Grey has made several trips from Rose and Naden Harbors with cargoes of meal and oil for the United States and European markets. She will make several more trips before the end of the season.
